

Morgan District keeps incentive

Developer gets another year with liquor license option

By Tom Ekvall
HERALD CONTRIBUTOR

After nearly two hours of discussion, the Oshkosh Common Council voted 6-1 to renew the Combination Class B liquor license held by the Morgan District for vacant land at 228 West 6th St., previously the site where Oshkosh Corp. had stored military vehicles.

City staff had recommended denial of renewing the license with the intent of "pooling" inactive licenses for future disposition. For the last three years, the council had allowed the Morgan District to renew the license as part of the developer's strategy to develop the parcel of land into housing and commercial space.

Peter Lang, representing the district at the public hearing for revocation of the license, argued that the company needs the license to attract potential development, although there was no indication of a potential occupant.

The license had been transferred to the Morgan District in April 2015 from Abelardo Lopez for the Vitale's Restaurant property then at 215 W. Murdock Ave. and dormant since November 2014. At that time, the plan was to use it for a restaurant as part of a mixed-use building. Lang said attempts to secure an occupant needing a liquor license have not been successful.

Ascension role fits Parrish

By Amy Knoll-Owen
HERALD CONTRIBUTOR

Recently named chief administrative officer at Ascension Mercy Hospital, Denise Parrish's passion for health care began at an early age.

When her younger brother was only a month old, he was in a car accident and had to be taken to Madison via Med Flight. There, Parrish saw how the nurses cared for him and decided that she wanted to care for others in the same way.

But the path to a nursing career was not an easy one. She came from a small town, where most people she knew either joined the family farm or worked in a factory. Parrish's mother helped her pursue her

First Congregational Church's original Tiffany windows on Algoma Boulevard in Oshkosh are being restored to their sky blue pink lustre as when first installed during construction of the church in 1912.

Tiffany illuminates church history

By Dan Roherty
OSHKOSH HERALD

More than a century after First Congregational Church leaders traveled to Louis Comfort Tiffany's glassworks factory in New York City to order stained-glass windows for its new home and sanctuary, the congregation is having their framed artistry restored.

Installed in 1912 along with the original sanctuary at 137 Algoma Blvd., the luminous blown-glass windows were among the special work produced by Tiffany for ecclesiastical and secular uses, more commonly in the form of lamps, vases and mosaics.

Dick Oelschlager, head of the church's building and grounds committee, said it was determined a few years ago that there were issues with the windows that needed restoration work. A capital campaign that included funding for the window repairs was established and completed last fall.

"We have three very large windows that were refurbished in 1988," Oelschlager

Coalition to measure successes

By Tom Ekvall
HERALD CONTRIBUTOR

How do you attract and retain employees in Oshkosh's workforce?

This was the question members of the Oshkosh Community Success Coalition dealt with June 13 as they put their heads together to come up with talent attraction ideas and strategies.

The coalition included officials from the city, economic development organizations, the University of Wisconsin-Oshkosh, school district and business leaders, and was sponsored by the Oshkosh Area Community Foundation.

foundation, said the project started when the foundation wanted to update its strategic plan and decided to work with what other agencies (city and school district) are doing to update theirs.

"We need to focus on attraction and retention of talent," Wyman told those at the meeting, where participants discussed opportunities at each table and then presented them to the entire group.

Among the topics discussed were diversity, creating a welcoming environment, college student engagement, marketing strategies, alumni contacts and hiring of interns. The results will be compiled and brought back to coalition committees and members.

"We are not a 'blue collar' town. We need to show it (Oshkosh) off," Wyman said, through building internal pride to create positive vibes for existing and future residents.

Kelly Lietz, vice president of marketing and communications for the Wisconsin Economic Development Corp., described state marketing initiatives to attract talent from around the country as well as keeping state residents from leaving.

Lietz described a program called

Think-Make-Happen in Wisconsin that is using digital media to get the message out.

He said the initial marketing effort focused on the Chicago area with future plans to include other regions throughout the country. Lietz said the campaign features benefits of living in Wisconsin such as lower housing costs, reduced commuting time and veterans benefits.

"We need to amplify what you are doing," Lietz told attendees, adding that his office is working with state universities to reach out to alumni and provide material through a toolkit that might help to attract talent back to Wisconsin.

He said there is no "brain drain" of students leaving Wisconsin, noting that 85 percent of all university graduates remain in the state and that 94 percent of technical college graduates also stay.

Lietz said the state did a perception survey of what others in the country think about when Wisconsin is mentioned. The most prevalent answers were beer, cheese, Packers and cold winters.

"We are much more than those things," he said. "We want to bring back millennials, alumni and transitioning veterans and their families to the state."

Scarves reflect anti-bullying initiative

Oshkosh and area residents are knitting and crocheting scarves for Oshkosh public school fifth-graders willing to wear them as symbols of kindness and support as part of an anti-bullying campaign (ABC) now in its fifth year.

Five-ounce skeins of Red Heart Super Saver yarn in current colors of Cammo, Fall, Plum Pudding, Mexicana or Monet are available at Joanne's Fabrics. Patterns are up to creators; sizes are about 7 by 50 inches.

More information is available at kathychap@gmail.com. Completed scarves can be dropped off at First Congregational Church on Algoma Boulevard where yarn is sometimes available.

Donations for the purchase of yarn are appreciated. ABC is about 40 percent on its way with funding; about 700 scarves are required each year.

Summer shelter needs served at Day By Day

Day By Day Warming Shelter operates a nightly-warming shelter from Oct. 15 to April 15 each year, but also offers two Outreach Days from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. each week during the off-season.

These Summer Outreach Days are available for homeless guests who stayed at the shelter at 449 High Ave. during the prior season between October and April. This is open for those guests who no longer have housing since the shelter closed, or even for those guests who may have moved into temporary or permanent housing.

Guests are able to come in on the scheduled Summer Outreach Days to take showers, get laundry done, socialize, rest and work with the operations manager to achieve their goals, including employment and finding housing.

Resource coordination and case management is also continually offered to promote self-sufficiency, stability and success. Since the shelter closed in April, five guests moved into apartments, one received a promotion at their place of employment, one started a new job, two bought vehicles and one has been sober for 65 days and preparing to move into a sober living house.

Monetary and donated items are accepted year-round; contact the Day by Day Administrative office at 920-203-4536 for the best time to drop off.

Expansive transload facility dedicated

By Tom Ekvall
HERALD CONTRIBUTOR

A $2 million Transload Rail Terminal in the Southwest Industrial Park was dedicated June 13 that city officials hope will lead to further developments and investments in the city.

An unusual ribbon-cutting ceremony was held when a locomotive engine was used to cut the ribbon with city officials and Gov. Scott Walker holding one end of the ribbon and employees with the Watco Transportation Services, the firm operating the transload terminal, on the other side.

The 11-acre facility off Clairville Road will enable businesses to transport material to the site in trucks that will then be loaded onto rail platforms to be transported around the country.

Jason White, executive director of the Greater Oshkosh Economic Development

Corp., said the project represents a "great public-private partnership opportunity" for the community, creating new options for businesses in shipping goods via the rail spur. Businesses will not have to be situated along rail lines to ship goods.

The transload facility has two spurs off the main line operated by Wisconsin & Southern Railroad, which is part of the Watco Cos., each more than 1,200 feet long with a ramp at the end. A loading area on each side of the spurs allows the terminal to be used for various types of commodities needing to be shipped.

City officials hope the transload facility will bring additional development to the Southwest Industrial Park and the community as a whole.

A major benefactor will be Oshkosh Corp. as it ships military vehicles elsewhere.

City Manager Mark Rohloff noted that this new site will remove noise objections from residents along Allerton Drive, where previous loading operations had been done on a spur.

The publicly owned facility received financial support from the city along with a $1 million transportation economic assistance grant for the project. The city put up $200,000 and Watco put up $770,000 as part of matching funds required.

The ribbon-cutting ceremony was attended by city, county and state public officials as well as economic development interests and local businesses such as Oshkosh Corp. State Transportation Secretary Dave Ross attended with Walker.

Walker said intermodal transportation is an important part of the state's economic development plans.

He also said he was proud, when visiting military members elsewhere, that Oshkosh Corp. and its Defense sector played a key role in keeping the nation safe.

City's emergency services efforts reviewed

By Tom Ekvall
HERALD CONTRIBUTOR

Oshkosh offers "top-notch" ambulance service through its Fire Department, Battalion Chief Chuck Hable, who manages the department's paramedic ambulance services and education programs, told members of the city's Committee on Aging at its June meeting.

Hable said the department uses paramedics for life support, which is the highest level of pre-hospital care available in emergency medical services.

The Fire Department serves the city and outlying communities such as Winne-conne, Omro and eight surrounding townships, and is able to take someone not only to Oshkosh hospitals, but to those in Fond du Lac, Neenah and Appleton. He said that a family can choose any of the hospitals as there are no geographic boundaries for service.

"More than 85 percent of patients are from Oshkosh and the remainder from other areas," Hable said in referring to 2017 statistics. Of this number, 35.9 percent are for advanced life support, requiring use of a heart monitor, medication or IV, while another 31.4 percent require basic life support, such as wound care, splinting or transporting.

He noted that in 2017, the most prevalent calls were for fall victims (1,760 or 19.6 percent of total calls) and sick people (1,383 or 15.4 percent).

Hable said that insurance providers require that the person be taken to a hospital for them to pay for the ambulance services. Otherwise the client must make payment for the charges. He added that if the person is treated and released or refuses to go to a hospital, the insurance company will not cover the ambulance cost.

The battalion chief noted that all six city fire stations have trained staff and that fire trucks are generally sent in addition to the ambulances to provide additional manpower support. A paramedic requires 1,500 hours of training, as compared to being an emergency management responder or an emergency management technician, which have less training time.

Of calls received, 33 percent have no insurance with some using the service to gain entrance into the medical system.

Ambulance costs can run $600 for basic life support and $700 for advanced life support for those in the city along with other charges such as transportation costs per mile.

Resource center marks elder abuse awareness

The Aging and Disability Resource Center (ADRC) of Winnebago County commemorated World Elder Abuse Awareness Day on June 15 by displaying a banner and 56 pinwheels in front of the Department of Human Services (DHS) building.

Every year an estimated 5 million, or 1 in 10, older Americans are victims of elder abuse, neglect or exploitation. Experts believe that for every case reported; as many as 23.5 cases go unreported.

The International Network for the Prevention of Elder Abuse and the World Health Organization at the United Nations launched the first World Elder Abuse Awareness Day on June 15, 2006, in an effort to unite communities around the world in raising awareness. WEAAD is in support of the U.N.'s International Plan of Action acknowledging the significance of elder abuse as a public health and human rights issue.

The 56 pinwheels in front of the DHS

Building represented the number of elder abuse reports made to the ADRC in 2017-18 for people 60 and older. Reports included concerns related to cases of self-neglect, financial exploitation, neglect by others, physical abuse and emotional abuse.

An elder adult at risk is someone age 60 or older that is subjected to any of the following types of abuse or neglect: physical abuse, emotional abuse, sexual abuse, treatment without consent, unreasonable confinement or restraint, financial exploitation, neglect by a caregiver, or self-neglect.

In nonemergency situations call the ADRC at 920-236-4695 or 877-886-2372 and ask for an adult protective services worker.

The ADRC also co-sponsored an elder abuse awareness educational event that featured state Attorney General Brad Schimel and retired San Diego elder abuse prosecutor Paul Greenwood.

Christ Lutheran Pastor Connie Weiss and First English Lutheran Pastor Tim Greenwald are working together with their congregations on a pig roast fundraiser Saturday.

Churches unite for community picnic

The congregations of Christ Lutheran and First English Lutheran churches are uniting to present a Pig Roast for a Purpose, which will combine the wholesomeness of a church picnic and the energy of community outreach fellowship.

The event planned from 3 to 9 p.m. June 23 at Christ Lutheran, 222 Church Ave., will raise funds for Jerri Schmidt, who requires lymphedema surgery that her insurance company will not cover. While that fight is ongoing, the need for surgery is critical as she struggles to remain an active volunteer.

The Rev. Connie Weiss of Christ Lutheran was the impetus to make the event a reality by asking volunteers and church members for help.

"I've known Jerri for a long time and have witnessed her ongoing struggles. She is at a critical point and needs surgery to ensure that she will be able to walk and to do that with less pain," said Weiss.

The Rev. Tim Greenwald of First English said, "Jerri has been a lifelong member of First English. She is so giving and we see this as an opportunity to show support and appreciation for all the things she does for others."

They also have created www.GoFundMe.com/JustForJerri, which has a brief video sharing Schmidt's story and introducing the people and organizations supporting the effort.

The event will include a pig roast dinner, carnival games, music, bingo, face and nail painting, a massage chair, bouncy house, bake sale and silent auction. Tickets can be purchased at the event.

Entrepreneurs take risks that make it all possible

Running a business isn't all sunshine and rainbows. It takes dedication, sweat, time and the willingness to put everything you own on the line. You trade in managers for a whole slew of bosses. Customers, inspectors and the tax authorities are now your direct superiors.

It may be the American dream to be your own boss, but you cannot sleep your way to it.

I am not advocating for a pity party for business owners here. We know what we signed up for and hopefully love what we do. I just want to shed some light on the risk we take and the burdens we share.

First, the small business owner has accepted a phrase called the personal guarantee. What this means is even if you operate as an LLC or a corporation you still guarantee all your assets to your vendors and the banks.

If you fail, they can take your house, car and any other assets you own as payment. Scary stuff, but I understand why they do it. I mean, restaurants never go under, right?

Second, if you are big enough to have employees the cost is always greater than the pay you give them. For example, employees making $10 per hour actually cost me $12.11 per hour to employ them. It would be substantially higher if I offered insurance.

Most people do not realize the employer matches most of the taxes taken off of their employees checks. We also have workman's comp insurance that we pay for that covers any injury sustained at work, which is a very good thing and quite necessary, especially in a kitchen where we all share battle scars. It all adds up.

Jon Doemel

So in my business, it cost me $12.11 per hour for a $10-per-hour employee who takes home $7.60 of that pay after taxes. Let that sink in.

Last, I would like to emphasize the responsibility of the business owner. As much as we appreciate people working for us, we are responsible for keeping their jobs secure. Our families are not the only ones dependent upon our success. We are usually the last ones to cash our own paychecks making sure everyone else can. We also hold the ultimate liability of our employee's actions.

So please stop viewing us small business owners as the enemy. Nothing has been handed to me. I worked hard to get to where I am. The price continues to be paid. The risk will never go away.

I care deeply for all of my employees, my customers and my business. I am thankful for what we have built.

If you feel you are ready to take up the dream, the Chamber is here to help. I wish I knew that when I opened in 2004. The road is long and the risk runs deep, but the reward goes well beyond wealth. The satisfaction of accomplishing your dreams is definitely worth the blood, sweat and tears.

The U.S. Army has ordered 771 more medium tactical vehicles from Oshkosh Corp.

Army orders more FMTVs

The U.S. Army Contracting Command has placed four additional orders with Oshkosh Defense for a total of 771 Family of Medium Tactical Vehicles (FMTV) valued at $159.6 million.

"Oshkosh is eager to continue delivering on Army and Air Force requirements for a well-protected, versatile vehicle that supports a broad range of missions, both at home and abroad," said Pat Williams, vice president and general manager of Army and Marine Corps programs at Oshkosh Defense. "With the most recent award, Oshkosh will surpass production of the 28,000th vehicle under the current A1P2 contract."

Oshkosh Defense was first awarded the FMTV A1P2 contract in 2009. The current generation FMTV is composed of 17 models ranging from 2.5-ton to 10-ton payloads, enabling the vehicle to perform a wide range of missions, and to support combat missions, relief efforts and logistics and supply operations.

The Oshkosh FMTV integrates technologies needed on the battlefield and in support of Homeland Security. The vehicles feature a parts commonality of more than 80 percent, resulting in streamlined maintenance, training, sustainment and cost efficiency for the U.S. Army, Army Reserves, National Guard and U.S. Air Force.

Brooke Alsberg shows some of the baby items that were donated to Christine Ann Domestic Abuse Services as her request for her 6th birthday.

Birthday presents for Brooke were about giving to others

For her 6th birthday last month Brooke Alsberg turned her love for babies into something special.

Brooke, the daughter of Alicia and Rory Alsberg of Oshkosh, has already donated her hair twice for hairpieces for cancer patients and her time at the Challenge MS Walk for the last two years. She is now donating her birthday presents to Christine Ann Domestic Abuse Services.

Her family asked her friends to bring items that Christine Ann could use for babies rather than giving Brooke birthday presents. In response, a variety of items such as bottles, diapers and wipes arrived, and Brooke used her birthday gift cards to purchase more items to donate.

Her mother said one item Brooke especially wanted to get for the babies at Christine Ann was the double stroller on their wish list but she did not have quite enough.

Brooke is also paving the way for her younger sister Anna to do the same thing for her birthday in August with donations to the area Humane Society.

Healing place found with hostas

By Rob Zimmer
HERALD CONTRIBUTOR

Following the loss of her husband Jim earlier this year, Betty Humphrey of Oshkosh seeks solace and comfort in her sprawling shade oasis on the city's west side.

Humphrey, herself well into her 80s, has spent decades transforming expanses of lawn into a soothing and comforting, tranquil sea of shade perennials — namely hostas — as well as trees and shrubs. It is a passion she has sought comfort in for many seasons, nurturing young seedlings and starter plants into mature, sprawling specimens that command attention in the garden.

So impressed were organizers of the upcoming National Hosta Convention in Green Bay next summer that Humphrey's Oshkosh garden was chosen as one of the featured tour stops of a prestigious and well-attended national celebration of hostas and companion plants.

"It's an honor to be chosen to be among the gardens on the bus tours for the 2019 hosta convention," Humphrey said. "My hostas are my joy and I love to be able to share my gardens with others who enjoy them."

As the Humphreys settled into their

The sprawling shade gardens of Betty Humphrey will be featured on next year's national convention of the American Hosta Society in Green Bay. Bus tours will bring convention goers to Humphrey's Oshkosh garden.

Oshkosh home and Jim was no longer able to get out and enjoy the gardens as much as he would have liked, Betty continued laboring away in the shadows beneath the towering hickories and oaks that dominate the wooded property.

Often working alone, Humphrey carefully inspects each hosta and plant in the garden regularly throughout the growing season to determine if it should be divided, moved elsewhere, shared with her daughters or lovingly added to the enriching compost heap that feeds her treasures.

The Humphrey garden features hundreds and hundreds of hosta specimens in all their mature glory. This includes many rarities, hard-to-find varieties and companion plants that perfectly showcase and complement the form, coloration and textures of the hostas she has collected over the years.

A serene koi pond surrounded by a gravel sea filled with succulents, ornamental grasses and other accent plants, garden art and statuary forms a focal point along the outdoor patio where Humphrey enjoys sitting in the shade, nibbling on a sandwich and listening to the calls of the songbirds that call the garden home.

The birds are as much a part of the garden as the hostas and companion plants. Humphrey enjoys the songbirds throughout the four seasons, even during winter when she provides homemade suet, as well as several birdfeeders and a heated birdbath for her feathered friends and angels to enjoy.

During spring and summer, hummingbirds, orioles, grosbeaks, tanagers and other birds delight Humphrey as she prepares and enjoys meals at the kitchen table that overlooks the backyard garden.

Humphrey's placement on the national stage for the 2019 Convention of the American Hosta Society provides just the inspiration and motivation she needs to collect her thoughts and heal a broken heart as the fresh air and sunshine help to keep her mind, body and spirit youthful and energized. With just one more growing season to prepare, she'll be hard at work putting together the final touches.

To be a featured garden in a national convention of this scale is an honor Humphrey does not take lightly as she prepares and arranges plants with perfection among the flowing islands of color and texture that surround her home in the woods.

It is here that Betty Humphrey finds her healing place.

Garden Club scholarships announced

The Oshkosh Garden Club recently awarded two $1,000 scholarships to students from Oshkosh in a field of science.

Grace Hageman, a former North High graduate attending Cornell University in New York, will receive a second scholarship from the club. She is studying plant biology and entomology in the College of Agriculture and Life Sciences.

Senior graduate Aristidis Giannopoulos from Valley Christian School was awarded a scholarship to attend the University of Wisconsin-Madison. He will pursue a degree in biochemistry at the College of Agriculture and Life Sciences.

Garden Club scholarships are renewable for three additional years, so depending upon the schedules of those receiving them they are not available every year. They are funded by proceeds from the club's annual Scholarship Luncheon, which will be held Nov. 17.

The club also announced that Mikayla Moran, a former student from Lourdes Academy, has received the National Scholarship Award of $4,000 for the second year. She is studying at the University of Georgia, pursuing a degree from the College of Family and Consumer Science in education.

Students in their sophomore year at college may access the Wisconsin and national scholarships at www.cffoxvalley.org/scholarships and www.gardenclub.org.

Legion scholarships awarded to four seniors

The Cook-Fuller American Legion Auxiliary Unit No. 70 has awarded $500 scholarships to four senior high school students who have maintained GPAs above 3.0 for seven semesters, are descendants of veterans and have enrolled in a college or university for continued education.

A $500 scholarship was also awarded to a student from the Riverside Program.

The students include Kylie Hibbs, Oshkosh West High School; Kiran Lowenstein, Oshkosh North High School; Abigail Giese, Lourdes Academy; Jordan Paterson, Valley Christian School; and Caleigha Gomez, from the Riverside Program.

A restored XP-82 is expected to make its first public appearance at this year's AirVenture.

Twin Mustang restored, coming to EAA

From EAA

The restorers of a North American XP-82 "Twin Mustang," one of the most unusual fighter/escort aircraft ever deployed by the U.S. military, are aiming to make EAA AirVenture Oshkosh 2018 its first public appearance to celebrate completion of an arduous 10-year project.

The 10-year restoration project in Douglas, Ga., began after aircraft restorer Tom Reilly discovered the complete airframe on a farm in Ohio. Reilly then scoured the earth seeking engines, propellers and a multitude of other XP-82 parts to continue the restoration.

"The interest and enthusiasm for this restoration has been wonderful and gratifying," said Reilly, who has chronicled the restoration process online. "There is no better place than Oshkosh to make the first public flights of this aircraft, which is why it is our intent to complete the restoration and testing so we can be a part of AirVenture 2018."

The XP-82 restoration brings back a unique flying example of an aircraft designed late in World War II as a long-range fighter escort to accompany B-29 bombers for thousands of miles on missions over the Pacific Ocean. Based on the highly successful P-51 "Mustang" design, the XP-82 used twin fuselages and two specially designed Rolls-Royce Packard-built Merlin engines to supply the speed, range and armament needed for the task. Fewer than 300 of the airplanes were produced as the P-82, with all but five scrapped in the years after the Korean War as the military moved to jet aircraft.

The 66th annual Experimental Aircraft Association fly-in convention is July 23-29 at Wittman Regional Airport.

Windows at First Congregational Church showed signs of buckling in places and were in need of other repairs that are nearing completion.

said. "But none of the lower 22 street-level windows were done at that time. They appeared to be having some bulges both horizontally and vertically."

Six companies made proposals to do the work before the church selected Staige Stained Glass Restoration of Onalaska. The company has so far refurbished about 14 of the 22 lower-level windows, which are more than 6 feet tall and weigh at least 150 pounds.

The restoration work involves replacing the lead material holding the glass patterns together as well as removing old paint and repainting the window trim.

Oelschlager said the original Tiffany glass "contains, for example, gold dust, uranium dust and ivory dust," which creates a "sky blue pink" style to represent a sunset. Six-inch bubble cylinders of glass were blown, then flattened, then cut into sections by leading the glass into frames.

"The glass itself has a pattern in it ... that the glass does not have an interruption in the pink and blue colors," he said.

Tiffany was credited with developing a technique where each piece of cut glass was edged in copper foil before soldering the work together to create his windows and lamps, creating a level of detail unique at the time.

Oelschlager said the lower-level windows each cost $199 at the time. In 1978, he said a similar window was auctioned at Christie's for $60,500.

"Now they're invaluable and irreplaceable," Oelschlager said. "You can't replicate Tiffany's process."

More examples of the artistry and craftsmanship of Tiffany will be on display at an exhibit opening June 23 at the Paine Art Center from Chicago's Richard H. Driehaus Collection.

Once the windows are reinstalled, Staige will cover both the large and lower-level windows with quarter-inch plate glass protective coverings within an extruded aluminum frame.

First Congregational Church was first organized here in July 1849, according to the Oshkosh Public Museum, and has been based at the same downtown location since 1858. The current church was dedicated in January 1912.

dream career by setting up interviews with the family doctor and suggesting Parrish volunteer at the Reedsburg Area Medical Center.

There Parrish became the first teenage volunteer reading to children and making deliveries between departments. Volunteering gave her an opportunity to observe a hospital setting up close and confirmed to her that nursing was a career she wanted to pursue.

Thirteen days after graduating high school Parrish joined the Army, where she became part of a mobile Army surgical hospital. Her experience there exposed Parrish to different cultures and taught her the value of teamwork.

In preparation for deployment she and the soldiers, nurses and doctors she worked with would sometimes be called up in the early hours of the morning to set up the hospital.

"There was no rank until the hospital was up so everybody had to help," said Parrish. "And it really made everybody pitch in because the doctors and the nurses wanted the hospital up so they could be acknowledged as officers."

The experience helped Parrish see what leadership could look like, paving the way for her future career.

After the Army Parrish attended the University of Wisconsin-Oshkosh, where she received bachelor's and master's degrees in nursing. Beginning her career at Ascension Mercy in 1997, Parrish worked her way up from CNA to registered nurse to manager.

"As I kept on taking different positions, it gave me the opportunity to learn pieces of the hospital that I didn't know about," she said.

She eventually became the director of acute care, then vice president of patient care services. When her job began to involve budgeting she went back to school to get her master's in business administration, which she has almost completed.

Parrish credits her longevity at Ascension Mercy in her success. Over the years she has gotten to know the physicians and nurses she works alongside, as well as their families. They know her as well and they have a mutual respect. And, said Parrish, her values align with Ascension Mercy's to make it a natural fit.

In her time at Ascension Mercy Parrish has seen the rate of change in health-care accelerate.

"It feels like you don't have time to catch your breath to make sure that you're implementing change effectively and that you're taking into consideration all the key stakeholders," she said.

Part of the accelerating pace has been technology and Parrish has seen more contact via email and fewer face-to-face relationships. It's a change that concerns Parrish because the relationships that nurses build with one another are crucial for patient care.

But Parrish is no stranger to leading through change and she considers it one of her greatest strengths.

"I took over after we had been through a great deal of change and there was a lot of fear in our culture," said Parrish. "And I feel that I was able to bring us back to where we wanted to be."

Parrish has two main goals for her new role at Ascension Mercy. The first is continuing to provide quality patient care. Ascension Mercy is one of fewer than 50 hospitals in Wisconsin to have a five-star CMS rating – a fact Parrish is proud of and one that she said is critical to maintain.

Her second goal is to take care of the associates. For Parrish, it's an extension of her dream as a child. Now instead of helping at the bedside she's sharing knowledge and empowering those she works with to care for patients to the best of their abilities.

"I often look at the staff as my patients," said Parrish. "They're the ones I need to care for so they can deliver the care to the patient. And it's my job to make sure that they're satisfied with their work. If I do those two things, I'll be happy."

Women Soar program has openings

Limited openings remain in EAA's Women Soar program July 22-25, which strives to engage, inspire and educate young women to pursue aviation dreams during EAA AirVenture Oshkosh, which is scheduled for July 23-29.

EAA is committed to growing participation in aviation by women, as less than 10 percent of all active pilots are women. The program allows for high school-age girls to explore career options, make discoveries and find new inspirations within aviation.

This year's female mentors include one of the highest ranking aerobatics competitors, Debby Rihn-Harvey, as well as aviation enthusiasts and educators Tami Ryley and Rochelle Oslick. Ryley and Oslick both are former military pilots and flew many airplanes ranging from F-16s to Grumman C-2 Greyhounds.

The program features air shows, mentor meetings and hands-on workshops. Previous workshops included photography, flight simulations and aircraft building skills.

Registration is $100 and open through July 1, programming, meals and weeklong admittance to AirVenture is included. More information at www.eaa.org/wsyz.

Rental inspections policy workshop set

The council will hold a public workshop on the state's new rental inspection law at 5 p.m. June 26 in Room 404. The workshop on Act 317 will be held in conjunction with the Rental Housing Advisory Board. City staff will discuss plans for implementation of the new requirements.

that failure to complete requirements for a license and/or failure to conduct a license-related business on a premise for which it has been issued for a year violates ordinances and may be grounds for revocation of the license. In 2016 and 2017, the council had granted waivers from that provision for the Morgan District in pursuit of commercial development.

Councilman Tom Pech Jr., who voted in favor of the renewal, reminded Lang that each year at the time of renewal the council heard a similar refrain that the license was needed for future development. Pech said his vote could go either way but agreed to one last request before revocation could likely be in store.

"We want to see some action," he said.

Mayor Steve Cummings, who also voted for renewal, said the issue to him was one of fairness to all in the community.

Voting against the measure to approve the license was Councilman Steve Herman.

City Manager Mark Rohloff said in arguing for denial of the license renewal that the concept of pooling licenses is new to the city as a way to maximize the ability to respond to requests. Previously, license holders could ask for a waiver and hold onto the license for another year when up for renewal.

Rohloff said there are several others with inactive licenses, such as the former Repp's Bar and Robbins Restaurant.

Lang said he was surprised when the Morgan District received notice there would be a hearing to revoke the license at the council meeting.

"No one advised us of the process now involved from city staff," he said. "We need this as a tool in our toolbox for redevelopment of the property."

Pech said the city has been a partner in efforts toward development of the property in response to Lang's comments about there being a lack of partnership.

In other action, the council approved plans for a second Casey's Convenience Store at Oshkosh Avenue and the extension of Westfield Street to the north on a 6-1 vote with Cummings voting against the motion. The approval was for a conditional use permit and specific implementation plan for the fuel station and convenience store, with the Planning Commission also having recommended approval.

Cummings said the Oshkosh Avenue corridor needs to be a gateway into the city and wanted to make sure that any development would be high quality and not a "hodgepodge."

"We need a plan for this area," he said. "What is the vision for this section of the city?"

Other council members supported the project, noting that Casey's was providing a high-quality development and has worked well with city staff in developing plans for the project.

"Casey's has met the standards and exceeded them," said Pech, who added, "We have to work with what's given to us."

Community news briefs

Two men escape from Correctional Center

Two male inmates escaped Monday morning from the Winnebago Correctional Center, a minimum security state facility, Oshkosh police reported.

James R. Heather, 27, and Alexander C. Weinmann, 25, were reported missing. Heather was convicted of drug possession and firearm possession by a felon. Weinmann was convicted of burglary and criminal damage to property.

The two remained at large as of Tuesday's print deadline.

There was no clothing description provided. Anyone with information regarding their whereabouts is asked to contact the Oshkosh Police Department at 920-236-5700.

Jackson turn restriction at New York Ave. revived

The Traffic and Parking Advisory Board returned to the Common Council its approval of a left-turn ban from Jackson Street to New York Avenue from 3 to 7 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Committee members felt the ordinance change was needed to prevent accidents at the intersection, noting that it ranks as one of the highest in the city. Council members had voted down the change and sent it back to the committee for further review.

Council member Steve Herman, who had voiced objection to the ordinance change as being unenforceable, said he was appreciative of new information brought to light about traffic problems there. Committee members discussed ways to make motorists more conscious of the no-left-turn situation.

One suggestion was to reduce the speed limit from 30 to 25 mph, which did not get support.

Another option discussed was a corridor study of Jackson Street by a planning firm that would not be completed until next year.

Jackson Street is an alternate to Interstate 41 for coming in and out of the city and is part of the state's highway plan.

9th Avenue left-turn lane reconfiguration underway

The city's Transportation Department was in the process of painting new lane lines this week on 9th Avenue from Reichow Street to Knapp Street after converting this section into three lanes.

The Traffic Review Advisory Board recommended and Common Council approved removing parking from Reichow to Knapp to revise the road reconfiguration to one lane in each direction and a shared left-turn lane.

City officials said this two-lane section of 9th Avenue has often been driven as if it were four lanes, and hope the reconfiguration will reduce sideswipe and rear-end crashes by getting left-turning vehicles out of the travel lane.

General obligation bond rating holds for city

The city's above-average debt burden was cited by Moody's Investors Service recently as a contributing factor in maintaining its Aa3 rating. Its stormwater rating also was maintained at A1 for its bond series.

The city's annual general obligation borrowing limit of $11,400,000 is being sustained as part of the Common Council's commitment to reducing the debt burden. City Manager Mark Rohloff in a recent newsletter noted that the general fund has maintained "stable and satisfactory reserves" that are attributable to financial planning and introduction of pay-as-you-go tax incremental financing districts.

"The city has a stable operating trend, satisfactory reserves and somewhat elevated leverage related to long-term debt and pension liabilities," the Moody's report stated.

He said the city has been faced with a stagnant tax base and valuations that affected available debt capacity, with last year's values representing the first notable increase since the 2008 economic downturn.

Miss Wisconsin contestants signed photos for visitors to their table at the Oshkosh Saturday Farmers Market last weekend in-between competing in the statewide pageant.

New Miss Wisconsin crowned from Wisconsin Rapids

Tianna Vanderhei of Wisconsin Rapids was crowned Miss Wisconsin 2018 during pageant competition in Oshkosh.

Vanderhei, competing as Miss Wood Violet, earned $10,000 in scholarship money from the June 16 competition at the Alberta Kimball Auditorium. First runner-up was Miss Seen Rivers Jessica Hammer, second runner-up was Miss South Central Elise O'Connell and third runner-up was Miss La Crosse Oktoberfest Madeline Kim.

"Let's Talk: Skill Sets 4 Success" is Vanderhei's platform and she performed a contemporary lyrical dance to "Lean on Me."

She has her bachelor's degree in organizational and professional communication studies and sports broadcasting from the University of Wisconsin-La Crosse. She will also be pursuing a master's degree from the University of Wisconsin.

Vanderhei will compete in the Miss America competition Sept. 10.

FVTC offers welding boot camp

Fox Valley Technical College is hosting two informational sessions on its new grant-funded boot camp for individuals interested in pursuing welding as a career.

The first session is scheduled from 8:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. June 26, followed by a second option scheduled from 8:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. July 9. Both events will be held at FVTC's Advanced Manufacturing Technology.

During the free session, college educators will cover topics like attendance expectations, equipment and materials, and an internship component. After 30 days in the program students begin working under a paid internship arrangement with an area employer. Upon completion of the program, students earn a welding certificate and an opportunity to work for a local company.

Students without a high school diploma can also enroll. Part of the offering is designed to help learners earn a high school credential, if applicable, with the support of a life coach while simultaneously learning a technical skill.

The 17-week program begins in fall and runs from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. daily and is free for qualifying students, less a $6 insurance charge. The AMTC is the host site for all classes except for the last two weeks when students are required to work on-site with their employers. Last month, eight students completed the pilot program.

Registration is required to attend an informational session by visiting www.fvtc.edu/Bootcamp, or call 920-560-4232.

Fit Oshkosh co-founder honored

Tracey Robertson, co-founder and executive director of Fit Oshkosh, was named a Collaborator of the Year at the Black Women's Leadership Conference held recently in Madison.

The Carola Gaines Collaborator of the Year Award was introduced at the inaugural Black Women's Leadership Conference in 2016 and presented this year to Robertson by conference founder and motivational speaker Sabrina Madison. The award was inspired by Gaines for her work in health education and community outreach.

Robertson was lauded for bringing together community groups that included residents, academia, business, local police and others to engage in productive discussions about making Oshkosh a welcoming community for people of color and other minorities.

"We want to know about the black women across Wisconsin who are natural and empowering collaborators," Madison said. "They are leaders, champions, motivators, creators, doers, and oh so inspiring."

Classic vehicles on display at South Park

The Central Wisconsin Auto Collectors car show is set for June 24 at South Park.

The free event from 7 a.m. to 4 p.m. includes a playground for children, food and beverage stands, cash raffles, door prizes, a swap and flea market, and entertainment by DJ Sizzlin' Sonny's Rockin' Roadshow.

Proceeds from food and beverage stands benefit the Boys & Girls Club of Oshkosh and Winnebago County Veterans Museum.

With 16 judging classes, hundreds of cars from around Wisconsin are on display. Cars can register for $10 a vehicle; registration closes at noon.

Community input sought on United Way's goals

The Oshkosh Area United Way's Allocations and Community Impact Committee is looking for partners to be involved in a results-based accountability (RBA) process to determine overarching goals and metrics for the community.

Partners will use RBA, which is a data-driven, decision-making process to help the United Way define the results they seek, engage partners and be accountable by using data to continually measure progress.

For more than 10 years the outcomes process has been used to measure results. In an effort for continuous improvement and part of the organization's strategic plan, the Oshkosh Area United Way is moving to RBA to allow it and the community to narrow its focus.

The fast-track process needs community members to be part of work groups — people with experience in mental health, early childhood and access to jobs, as well as a general passion to make an impact. The time commitment is fewer than 15 hours over the next three months. Expectations for the work groups include:

- Attending four meetings, with one of those meetings being a data walk.

- Holding five mini-conversations to discuss four questions with co-workers, consumers, community partners, friends, and/or family (about 30 minutes each).

- Identifying other partners to be involved.

- Bringing data to the walk and identifying data to collect.

- Serving as subject matter experts to research best practices.

The first meeting will be June 28 at the Oshkosh Public Library to introduce and create goals. The Mental Health Work Group meets at 8 a.m., followed by the Access to Jobs with Living Wage Work Group at noon and Early Childhood Work Group at 3 p.m.

The data walk for all work groups is set for July 9. The three groups will then meet Aug. 1 and Aug. 28 at the Oshkosh Public Library to discuss and then formulate plans for mental health efforts, jobs access and early childhood issues.

Those interested are asked to register at 920-235-8560 by June 25; questions about the process or United Way can be addressed to Tina Barzano at oaouw@oshkoshunitedway.org.

Ace scored at Westhaven

As a member of the Sunset Social Golf League at Westhaven Golf Club, Gary Mathe shot a hole-in-one June 7. The ace occurred on the 5th hole, a 103-yard par 3.

Mathe used a Top-Flite golf ball and a TaylorMade RocketBallz pitching wedge. This was said to be the first ace in more than two years at Westhaven and the first for Mathe.

With three witnesses, it was recorded with the U.S. Golf Register. Mathe bought drinks for the entire league.
