UW-Oshkosh men earn first NCAA championship

The University of Wisconsin-Oshkosh men's basketball team returned to the NCAA Division III championship game with unfinished business and came away with the national crown Saturday night.

The Titans team returned in glory to the campus and Kolf Sports Center for a welcome-home ceremony Sunday afternoon to share the accomplishment with the community.

A balanced team effort led by junior center Jack Flynn's 33 points was launched by an 11-0 start that put them ahead for the entire game against Swarthmore College for a 96-82 victory at Allen County War Memorial Coliseum in Fort Wayne, Ind.

Making a return to the Final Four after last year's loss in the championship game, the Titans' first national basketball title came a day after its 104-85 victory over Wheaton College in the semifinals.

Interim head coach Matt Lewis directed the 29-3 Titans to the school's first national championship since the women's indoor track and field team won the 2014 Division III title.

Business tax exemption challenges city budget

Payback to Festival Foods part of state tax update

By Dan Roherty
OSHKOSH HERALD

While unanimously approving a $23,000 tax payback to Festival Foods at its March 12 meeting, the Common Council was equally united in its disappointment with the state's latest revision of personal property tax assessments that could potentially add to homeowners' tax bills.

The council approved rescinding a $23,331.47 property tax assessment last year against Festival's Titanfest Inc. that recent state legislation required municipalities to adjust for on business equipment property, in this case machinery storage areas that now fall under a code exemption. City officials said the attorney general's January interpretation of the state's 2017-19 biennial budget on what qualifies prevents an accurate review for assessment purposes.

Council member Deb Allison-Aasby said the returned tax payment speaks to a larger issue of being able to identify the city's cash flow and budget accordingly.

Finance director Trena Larson told the council that legislators expected municipalities to come out even with the tax break revisions assuming the machinery exemption would be limited. She said it is now allowed to be claimed in ways that the city won't be able to either track or assess.

"Any (machinery) purchases after (2017) no longer are reported or even on paper and the city will experience significant lost revenue from this," she said.

"This is another case of the folks in Madison ... taking away something from the communities, not just Oshkosh, promising to make us whole and failing to live up to their promise," said Mayor Steve Cummings.

Larson

Separate from the "dark store" issue of big-box retailers and their push for assessment of warehouses the same as similarly sized empty buildings, the personal property tax exemptions relate to all businesses claiming writeoffs for items used in their operations. Small businesses rely on tax breaks for their livelihood but city officials are trying to catch up with the implications of the latest state interpretations for machinery exemptions.

"Local businesses are being made aware of this new exception and are being encouraged to come forward and ask for the refund," said Larson, who said there will be an estimated loss of $7.8 million from the city's tax assessment total as a result.

Allison-Aasby said Oshkosh-area legislators who she and others talked to were surprised that the changes were going to make such a tax burden shift. Council member Thomas Pech Jr. said the Legis-

City activity, CAR program updated

Oshkosh Herald

The chief executive of the Greater Oshkosh Economic Development Corp. briefed the Common Council last week on its 2018 annual report and ongoing activity that highlighted the Oshkosh Avenue corridor among other focused areas.

Jason White gave a PowerPoint review of the report that showed new construction in the city last year valued at more than $52 million, a third of that residential and almost $34 million in commercial projects that the city's economic development partner tracks.

He pointed to new developments on or near Oshkosh Avenue in the works as construction of Oshkosh Corp.'s new global headquarters leads the transformation on the heels of recent street improvements.

"Obviously that area has attracted a lot of attention; the city has invested a lot along that corridor," White said as he showed a map provided by the city with potential development projects that are being drawn to that part of the city. New business construction includes Bank First National offices, a Fox Communities Credit Union location and Casey's General Store, with a projected hotel project.

Two federally approved Opportunity Zones on the east side in the central city and Sawdust District that were pointed to offer tax incentives for businesses and individuals to invest within. White also noted Alro Steel's new 195,000-square-foot manufacturing facility under construction that has prompted steady inquiries about what's going up on Poberezy Road near the Experimental Aircraft Association grounds.

White also provided an update on the Catch a Ride (CAR) program involving many different organizations to help get residents the needed transportation for work. Feonix, East Central Wisconsin Regional Planning Commission, AmeriCorps, Lutheran Social Services, the state DOT and Forward Service Corp. are all involved in some form to administer and fund the service plan.

GO-EDC was awarded a Commute to Careers grant for $30,051 last year by the state Workforce Development and Transportation departments for on-demand transportation services for workers in the greater Oshkosh area. Grant funds can be used to subsidize fares and mileage costs and make the services affordable to unemployed, underemployed, disabled and low-income workers.

"This has evolved an unconventional series of partners that have come together to look at this issue," White said. "This has become a very important thing for our community because there are a number of people who would like a ride to work and do not have a second car in the home or do not have a reliable means of transportation.

"It's really been enlightening to see the collaboration coming together on this."

An informational session for potential volunteer drivers was held last Wednesday, and White said at least six drivers have been secured with rides underway and employers beginning to sign on.

LEGOmania contest returns to library

Oshkosh Public Library

The sky's the limit as children ages 2 to 17 create, strategize, engineer and build an original entry for the LEGOmania Design Contest at the Oshkosh Public Library.

Marie Boleman, Head of Children's & Family Outreach Services, said the contest fits into the library's role as a catalyst for creativity.

"Children are constantly taking in new information, comparing it to what they already know and creating new ideas as a result," she said. "Activities like creating an original LEGO design allow them to express these ideas, which in turn, leads to deep learning and growth."

Judging for the contest will take place March 29. Entries can be dropped off in the library's lower-level Tech Lab from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. March 28.

The library has a new LEGO wall and LEGO books to inspire builders, and children can also build an entry using the library's LEGO bricks during a scheduled open build session or by calling 236-5208 to reserve an appointment.

Oshkosh Corp. engineers will be at the library from 11:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. that Friday to help kids build their own racer. In addition, there will be a LEGO Wall Open Build for Kids from 3:30 to 5 p.m.

First-place winners will receive a $15 gift certificate from House of Heroes. Books will be awarded to first- and second-place winners. Rules and entry forms are at oshkoshpubliclibrary.org or the library.

Studio takes on one well-framed image at a time

By Dan Flannery
HERALD CONTRIBUTOR

Thirty-five years is a long time to hold a job. But if you take the chance to call your own shots, 35 years doing work you love can fly by.

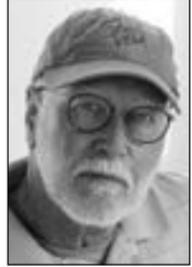

Don Stolley has lived that life.

At 71, Stolley's time in Oshkosh has covered a lot of ground — stints as a photographer and photography instructor at the University of Wisconsin-Oshkosh, involvement with a variety of community projects and good works for fellow artists, and building a commercial photography business with a reputation for high-quality work.

That business — Stolley Studio — celebrated 35 years in operation March 15, with a list of clients that reads like a "who's who" of Wisconsin businesses — Oshkosh Corp., Kimberly-Clark, Harley-Davidson, Miller Brewing, Johnsonville, Anchor Foods and many more.

So, yes, you probably know his work. He's been shooting still photography in this market for advertising, marketing and business-to-business purposes for a long time.

"I've outlived a whole lot of big corporations that I've shot for," he said in an interview. "People that are no longer here, like Oshkosh B'Gosh and Leach Truck and Morgan Door and Buckstaff and a whole bunch of advertising agencies that I've shot for that are no longer in business. ... That sounds a little negative, but that's also something I can certainly be proud of."

Today, Stolley works for himself and by himself, sometimes in his studio at 502 N. Main St., but more often on location for a client. At one point he employed a half-dozen or so others, but with time found that working solo suited him and his clientele just as well.

The need for a sales team diminished as longtime clients kept coming back for more of Stolley's high-end photography.

"We're down to the point where we have so many return clients," said Dana Stolley, Don's wife of almost 47 years.

Neither Dana nor her husband see full retirement in the future. "I think he wants to die with the cable in his hand," she said.

The story of Don and Dana's arrival in Oshkosh is a pretty common one around these parts: They came for a job in 1977 and thought they'd be here for three years, at the most.

They've raised three successful children (Dylan, 44, general manager of Becket's; Caitlin, 36, a fashion designer in Nashville; Kendall, 34, a blogger, writer and mixologist in Nashville). They've been involved in community projects and good works, including Growing Oshkosh, an organization that promotes sustainability and local food sourcing via an Oshkosh-based farm and garden.

Don has had several stints at the University of Wisconsin-Oshkosh, including a long stretch as a photography instructor. After coming here for a UWO job in 1977, he retired from there in 2015.

Don, a California native, met Dana while he was in graduate school at the University of Iowa in the early 1970s. Dana, a graduate of that school, worked many years at the Oshkosh Public Library until her retirement.

The entire family has played a role in the success of Stolley Studio, including modeling for some of Don's photo shoots, and that makes 35 successful years just a bit more special.

Ultimately, Don says, the success of his business — or any business — is usually based on having a good plan and being honest in how that plan is working.

"For startups, it's important to have a really solid business plan, where you sort of look at what's the worst that could happen and what's the best that could happen," Don said.

"And you have people who can be sort of ruthless, and help you put together a business plan that will work.

"I had really good help when I was starting out. ... You know, your family wants you to succeed, so they're going to go, 'Oh, this is the best idea since sliced bread.' But if you're talking to an accountant or a banker or a friend who owns a business ... you need somebody who's going to be honest and make an honest appraisal. They can be wrong, you know, but you need to have advice like that."

Rains on top of warmup bring overflows

Oshkosh Herald

Precipitation on top of snow melt brought some pre-spring havoc in the city last week and still lingering in some areas.

James Rabe, the city's director of public works, said that in some cases the flooding was a result of ice dams formed when large chunks flowed down small streams and blocked culverts or bridges. In other cases he said it was simply a case of too much water due to the rapid snow melt coupled with rainfall.

The city temporarily closed several streets Thursday, including West 9th Avenue from Westhaven to Oakwood Road; Oakwood from Newport to 9th; Westfield Street from Robin to Oshkosh avenues; and North Main Street from Packer to Fernau avenues.

"Please do not attempt to cross any flooded areas, including streets," Rabe said. "The current in these streams is very strong and can easily sweep people or vehicles away. With the cold temperature of the water, it will not take long for hypothermia to set in."

Residents can help reduce the likelihood of street flooding by clearing snow and ice from the catch basins in front of their properties.

The state Department of Natural Resource's private water section has warned those with private wells outside the public water supply about runoff should have them checked and tested for bacteria and other contaminants. Wells located in pits, basements and low-lying areas are especially susceptible.

The snow and ice buildup over the winter was blamed for at least two roof collapses affecting local businesses.

Retailer Five Below's roof collapsed March 11 on South Koeller Street, causing it and surrounding businesses to shut down. Wisconsin Vision and Cousins Subs have since reopened but Ulta Beauty and Five Below remain closed.

Antiques store Ye Old Goat's roof also collapsed at 2755 Algoma Blvd. the day before that with no date being set yet for its reopening.

Shopko can't find buyer, to close stores by summer

Shopko Stores Operating Co. announced it will liquidate its assets and close its remaining stores by this summer after the retailer was unable to find a buyer amid its bankruptcy proceedings.

The Ashwaubenon-based store chain filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection in January. The company said in a Monday news release that it was unable to find a buyer for its remaining business.

Shopko officials said it will start an "orderly wind-down" of its retail operations starting this week. Records filed in the bankruptcy case Monday identified the remainder of the company's stores to be liquidated that had been spared from the initial closures list.

The new list includes 35 stores in Wisconsin, including the one in Oshkosh at 1300 S. Koeller St.

Shopko no longer will move forward with an assets auction that had been scheduled this week. Gordon Brothers will oversee the liquidation process, which is expected to take 10 to 12 weeks, the release said.

The company is evaluating strategic options for its optical business.

"This is not the outcome that we had hoped for when we started our restructuring efforts," chief executive officer Russ Steinhorst stated in the announcement.

Shopko said in its bankruptcy filing that it employed about 14,000 people across the country.

Business notes

Winnebago Community Credit Union held its 65th annual meeting March 7 where more than 90 of its member/owners re-elected incumbent board members Karen Koelbl and Ralph Nielsen to three-year volunteer terms. Board Chairman Thomas Geske reported the credit union is a sound financial institution with above $107 million in assets serving more than 7,700 members in Winnebago, Fond du Lac and Outagamie counties.

Verve, a Credit Union made the National Association for Business Resources' (NABR) 2019 Best and Brightest Companies to Work For list. Companies are nominated for the nationwide list, which is awarded by region, and are selected based on a lengthy self-assessment completed by the nominees and anonymous surveys sent to team members. Verve's work environment includes servant leadership training, an award-winning wellness program, casual attire days to raise money for charity and opportunities to participate in acts of kindness in the community known as Random Acts of Verve. Verve received the honor at a March 8 awards gala in Milwaukee.

School district looks for insurance options

The Oshkosh Area School District will be looking for employee health insurance options beginning in June to compare with its current agreement with Group Health Trust.

The district bids out its health insurance contract every five to seven years while reviewing coverage and benefits each year. The most recent review last year revealed a significant rate increase by Group Health Trust but officials determined the cost benefit of switching plans would have been negated by the abrupt disruption to the school workforce.

The Board of Education decided last fall to continue with GHT with a modified plan at the budgeted 8 percent rate increase for a year.

West Mock Trial team competes at state

Oshkosh West High School's Mock Trial "A" team competed at the program's state tournament March 8 and 9 after taking second place in the regional tournament to be part of the field of 22 teams.

West opened the tournament by competing against the eventual winner, Shorewood, but the team rebounded after that initial loss and ended up going 2-2 over the course of the weekend and earned 12th place out of 22 teams.

"I couldn't be more proud of the team for admirably holding their own against the toughest competition possible," team coach Will Brydon said. "The A team's success is truly a testament to the hard work and effort each student on both of our teams put in throughout the course of the season. From 6:15 a.m. meetings to Saturday scrimmages around the state, the commitment these students show makes them more than deserving of this distinction."

WineFeast fundraiser returns April 6 to Convention Center

The annual Winefeast fundraiser event is set for April 6 at the Best Western Premier Waterfront Convention Center. Proceeds go to the Boys & Girls Club of Oshkosh to benefit families and children with healthy meals and snacks, homework help, basic needs support, mentoring and programming that focuses on STEM education, staying active and building character and leadership skills.

A live auction will be held along with a short program, including a mission video and a story from Myrya Mueller, the 2019 Youth of the Year, about the impact the Boys & Girls Club has on Oshkosh youth and families.

The Mike Kubicki Quartet will be performing and there is a silent auction with more than 50 items along with wine, popcorn and chocolate raffle opportunities.

WineFeast is in need of silent and live auction items, which give businesses and individuals the opportunity to display their products.

For details contact WineFeastAuction@bgcosh.org. WineFeast, sponsored by Community First Credit Union, relies on the support of area businesses, in-kind sponsors and other community donors and attendees.

Lakeshore park plans

The council heard an update on a master plan for the new lakeshore park, which will be emerging from the former municipal golf course site adjacent to the Oshkosh Corp. global headquarters.

A professional service agreement was reached with SmithGroup out of nine design architects seeking to develop the extensive park space that borders the Fox River. John Fitzpatrick, representing the City Manager's office and its administrative services, and Parks director Ray Maurer gave an overview of the project and general schedule for public input.

A timeline will be created for the development sometime in April with a final document in place by late September or early October. Public meetings through the Parks Advisory Board are expected to be held by late April or early May, along with formation of Polco online questions for residents to consider and providing updates on the process through an email signup through the city's website.

Council member Steve Herman, who had expressed concerns during the process for selecting the Oshkosh Corp. location that it should have been more open while still backing the final selection, called for public visibility on how the park comes together.

"I just hope that city staff doesn't steer the ship because they kept the public out of the loop for the sale of the golf course completely, and this is the citizens' park," he said. "So I hope there is no perceived notion of what it's going to look like."

Fitzpatrick said he believes the public was kept informed on the headquarters site search and given a good degree of input opportunity on the process.

Oshkosh Defense workers challenge clock policy

By Miles Maguire
HERALD CONTRIBUTOR

Oshkosh Defense workers are pressing a federal lawsuit that alleges the company illegally rounds time-clock records to cut compensation, especially overtime pay.

Workers argue that since October 2015 the company has used a time clock policy in which "hourly employees' start and end times for their shifts were rounded in 15-minute increments."

The lawsuit alleges the rounding did not occur "to the nearest 15-minute interval despite the fact that employees performed compensable work during the period of time which was rounded." The company is accused of rounding in a way that reduced the recorded work time.

"As an example, under Oshkosh Defense's impermissible time clock rounding policy, if an employee punched in 5:50 a.m., Oshkosh Defense would round up to 6:00 a.m.," the lawsuit states. "Likewise ... if an employee punched out at 2:44 p.m., Oshkosh Defense would round down to 2:30 p.m."

Employees doing "compensable work past the end of their shift" would not get paid for it unless a full 15 minutes had passed.

The lawsuit, filed in October, alleges this policy has caused a loss of overtime pay at premium rates. It goes back three years because that is how the Fair Labor Standards Act allows for accusations of willful conduct.

For its part, "Oshkosh Defense denies that it has an impermissible time clock rounding policy and alleges it does not round employees' start times, end times or work time," the company said in a legal filing.

"Oshkosh Defense admits that, if an employee punched in at 5:50 a.m., it would disregard the 10 minutes from 5:50 a.m. to 6:00 a.m., but only if that employee's scheduled shift started at 6:00 a.m. and the employee performed no work from 5:50 a.m. to 6:00 a.m.," the company stated.

The lawsuit was brought by Farrah Marquette, a Neenah resident whose Facebook page says she used to work as a welder and now runs a machine tool called a press brake.

Although Marquette filed the suit individually, roughly two dozen Oshkosh Defense employees have since joined the suit. Her law firm, Hawks Quindel, has begun a social media campaign urging other Defense workers to join the case.

"Because of the ongoing nature of the case we are unable to comment," Katie Hoxtell, a corporate spokeswoman, said regarding the lawsuit.

Titans men capture first national basketball title

Return to Final Four brings winning formula

By Ricky Nelson
UW-OSHKOSH SPORTS INFORMATION

The University of Wisconsin-Oshkosh led the entire way during a convincing 96-82 victory over Swarthmore College in the final game of the NCAA Division III Men's Basketball Championship on Saturday in Fort Wayne, Ind.

The Titans (29-3) scored the first 11 points of the game en route to earning the first national title in the program's 121-year history. UW-Oshkosh, which made its first five shots from the field, entered intermission with a 45-37 advantage after leading by as many as 15 points in the first half.

Swarthmore College (29-4) of Pennsylvania pulled within three points on two occasions early in the second half, but UW-Oshkosh scored 10 unanswered points for a 57-44 lead and maintained a cushion of at least seven points for the final 18 minutes.

UW-Oshkosh's Jack Flynn, selected the Most Outstanding Player at the Final Four, paced five Titans in double figures with a career-high 33 points on 13-of-18 shooting from the field and 7 for 8 at the free throw line.

Connor Duax added 16 points for the Titans, who also received 14 apiece from Adam Fravert and Brett Wittchow, and 10 from Ben Boots. Fravert, who joined Flynn on the five-member All-Tournament Team, led all players with 12 rebounds for his 15th career double-double. Boots contributed six rebounds and a team-leading seven assists.

David Vlotho and Brian Wilman both contributed four points apiece off the UW-Oshkosh bench.

UW-Oshkosh shot 52.3 percent (34-65) from the field, 33.3 percent (7-21) from 3-point range and 80.8 percent (21-26) at the free throw line. The Titans owned advantages of 40-33 in rebounds, 16-15 in assists, 8-3 in blocks and 7-9 in turnovers. Both teams recorded four steals.

Swarthmore, making its Final Four debut, was led by Zac O'Dell's 22 points and 11 rebounds, including five on the offensive end. He shot 11 of 19 from the floor.

The Garnet's Cam Wiley had 20 points, five rebounds, seven assists and three steals. Conor Harkins and George Visconti rounded out the Swarthmore starting lineup with 17 and 13 points, respectively.

Swarthmore went 44.2 percent (34-77) from the field, 42.3 percent (11-26) from beyond the 3-point arc and 75 percent (3-4) at the foul line. The Garnet's four free throw attempts tied a season low.

UW-Oshkosh's first five possessions resulted in consecutive made jumpers from Fravert, Duax and two in a row by Flynn before a Wittchow 3-pointer gave the Titans an 11-0 lead at the 17:40 mark of the first half. Swarthmore missed its first six field goal attempts and was held scoreless until O'Dell scored in the lane with 17:10 left in the opening period.

Vlotho cut through the lane for a layup that increased the UW-Oshkosh lead to 19-6. The Titans later made another five straight field goals, including a Wittchow layup that provided their largest lead of the opening period at 31-16 with just under nine minutes in the first half as UW-Oshkosh began the game shooting 13-for-19 from the field and 4-for-4 at the free throw line during the opening 12 minutes.

Swarthmore responded with an 11-2 scoring run to cut its deficit to 33-27 following a 3-pointer by Visconti. Harkins, who entered the night with the sixth-most made 3-pointers in the country this season, nailed a long-range jumper to pull the Garnet within 40-37 late in the first half. However, Flynn scored a basket in the paint with 27 seconds to play in the opening period, and Boots hit a floater in the lane at the buzzer to give UW-Oshkosh a 45-37 advantage at intermission.

points at 45-42 and 47-44 in the opening minutes of the second half, but UW-Oshkosh regained control with 10 unanswered points, including the last eight by Duax, during the span of more than three minutes. Duax made a pair of 3-pointers and capped the spurt with a layup for a 57-44 lead at the 16:20 mark.

A Flynn layup increased the UW-Oshkosh cushion to 65-50 with 11:31 to go, and the Titans led by double figures the rest of the way after a 3-pointer from Fravert extended the UW-Oshkosh advantage to 83-73 with 3:30 left. The Titans then preserved the win by converting 13 of 16 attempts at the foul line over the final three minutes.

Completing the All-Tournament Team were Swarthmore's O'Dell and Wiley, and Aston Francis from Wheaton College.

The Garnet, one of the best defensive squads in the nation, gave up their highest point total of the year and allowed an opponent to shoot better than 50 percent from the field for the third time this season. Swarthmore had not allowed more than 95 points in the 187 games since a 97-67 loss to SUNY College at Old Westbury on Dec. 30, 2012.

UW-Oshkosh and Swarthmore went into the championship game ranked fourth and sixth in the country, respectively, by D3hoops.com.

Lourdes boys take team to memorable heights

Second-place state finish ends impressive season

By Brad Hartmann
HERALD CONTRIBUTOR

The dream finally came true for Lourdes Academy seniors Benny Huizenga and Henry Noone that they been craving for as young boys — playing on the biggest stage inside the Kohl Center in Madison.

“It’s a dream come true. Ever since I was a little kid I dreamed of getting here and so has he,” Noone said. “Benny has always been involved with Lourdes. His dad has been here for 20 years coaching. We are just thankful to get here, honestly. All the nights in the gym that we could have been out with friends, but in the end it’s all worth it.”

Noone and Huizenga led the Knights out of the tunnel in Saturday’s WIAA D4 championship game, where free throws and fatigue played a role in them coming up short in a 67-62 loss to New Glarus (26-2), who were making their first return to state since 1932.

“I thought our guys came ready to play and if you’re not come championship Saturday at 1 p.m. for a state title, then they shouldn’t be playing,” Knights coach Brad Clark said. “I saw that we were a little tired and little fatigued there in the end. We missed shots that we normally don’t.”

“I thought this was the first time this year we were fatigued. There was a lot of pressure on these kids and sometimes that’s not fair. You get put in that situation and you either come through or you don’t.”

Huizenga was one of the contributing factors in how the Knights (26-2) advanced to its fourth WIAA state appearance, battling back from a knee injury and having it scoped, but credits his doctors for getting him back on the court in five weeks.

“I thought for him realistically playing on one leg for the last four weeks is just great,” Clark said. “He was with us every step of the way since his injury in December and he really took a lot of things into perspective and when he came back he did what he could.”

When the final buzzer sounded Huizenga shared an emotional hug with his father, Ben, an assistant coach.

“It was both of our dreams to get there,” the younger Huizenga said. “I have watched him coach 17 years of my life and to finally get there with him was a special feeling with him.”

Just like in Thursday’s 70-68 semifinal victory over Osseo-Fairchild, Huizenga started the game swishing the first three as Jack McKellips was credited with the assist.

All season long Knights sophomore Preston Ruedinger has shown he is a gamer and played almost 36 minutes with 15 points against Osseo-Fairchild. He delivered a three-pointer with 6:34 left in the first half against New Glarus as the Knights regained the lead 25-23. Ruedinger, who had 17 points, five assists and three steals, hit a layup to regain the lead for the Knights with under a minute in the half in a game that had 18 lead changes and 12 ties.

It was an off night for Noone, the state’s top three-point shooter, but with 8:44 left he hit his first to keep the Knights within a point at 49-48.

“I was finally happy to see one fall in for the night. It was a great feeling. I thought maybe that would give us the momentum to go on a little run. I feel every shot that I took had some significance, even my makes and misses,” said Noone, who had 11 points and six rebounds.

The Knights missed five free throws in the final 8 minutes but Ruedinger hit two with 2:03 left to trail 63-61.

“I needed to hit those to stay within three but there were no nerves,” Ruedinger said. “Our coaches have told us all year our free throws are going to come down to us winning a gold ball or not and today it didn’t happen for us.”

The Knights’ student section had to be one of the most creative bunches at the tournament with chants of “moist mash potatoes,” “spicy cajun gumbo” and “warm choccymilk,” and when New Glarus missed two free throws toward the end they erupted as it left an opening. But with 1:19 left New Glarus capitalized on a Knights turnover to extend its lead to 65-61.

Hayden Jones (16 points, 10 rebounds) converts one of two from the line with 26.5 seconds left to cut the deficit to four. The next possession Josh Bauer made a heads-up play throwing the ball off a Glarner Knights player’s chest to create turnover. In the end a Knights’ pass went out of bounds with 5.6 seconds left as the chant of “thank you seniors” could be heard.

In Thursday’s semifinal Jack McKellips came away with one of his biggest rebounds of the year with 34 seconds remaining that led to Ruedinger bounce-passing to Jones for a layup to advance them to the championship game.

On their way to a silver ball trophy the team set a new school record of 26 wins while the senior class were part of a four-year record of 75-26.

“Every year is special. I told them to hold your head high and that you have nothing to be ashamed of,” Clark said. “Obviously they must feel dejected but they have to be so proud of what they accomplished. I told them there are 10 teams playing today and that they are one of them. We did get some hardware and not many teams can end the season by coming home with some hardware.”

Herd wins its final two home games of season

By Ti Windisch
HERALD CONTRIBUTOR

The Wisconsin Herd was 2-2 in games played this week and managed to end their season at home the right way with back-to-back wins at Menominee Nation Arena.

Wisconsin beat the Delaware Blue Coats in a double-overtime thriller on Wednesday and pulled out another tight win over the Lakeland Magic on Friday. Those wins were sandwiched with a home loss to the South Bay Lakers on Monday and a loss to the Wolves in Iowa on Saturday.

Christian Wood played in all three of the Herd home games, and put together an exceptional series of performances even by his standards. Wood averaged 33.3 points, 15.0 rebounds, 4.0 assists and 2.7 blocks per game in those three contests.

Wood dominated on both ends late in the Lakeland win, and Herd head coach Jordan Brady said after the game that he always is glad to get such great contributions from Wood.

“Christian does this for us every night, and I appreciate it every night,” Brady said. “Tonight he was huge on the defensive end late in the game. Several contests at the rim, several blocked shots, getting his hands on rebounds. I thought defensively those contributions may be unnoticed by most people but that was huge for us tonight.”

Following Wood in scoring for Wisconsin was Michael Qualls, who played in all four games and averaged 23.0 points, 7.3 rebounds, 2.8 assists and 1.3 steals per game in that stretch. Qualls said his goal for the season is to stay positive and improve his game.

“I just want to stay focused so I can make the shots I know I can make, take the shots when I'm supposed to take them, and just try to become a better basketball player,” Qualls said. “Focus on getting better, make the positives outweigh the negatives, and always keep a smile every day. Never let anybody waver your smile.”

The wins haven't been coming often for Wisconsin, which could cause players on losing teams to become disinterested. Qualls said the temptation is there for players in those sorts of situations, although he doesn't give into it.

“A lot of players clock out,” Qualls said. “It's easy to clock out, especially in a losing season. You can think of it in a negative way like you want to go home, and this and that, but I was just thinking that I want to finish strong, because people remember the last thing that you do.”

One factor that could lead to Herd players fighting hard all year is the home crowd in Oshkosh. Brady said the fans push the team forward, and that he hopes players recognize how great the environment is.

“This is hands-down the best environment to play in in the G League,” Brady said. “The teams that come in to play comment all the time about how great the atmosphere is. It's something that I know and I appreciate because I've been around a long time and understand how special it is, and I hope our guys understand how special it is that we have this support from the community.”

Despite the home slate being done, Brady said the Herd couldn't treat Friday's game like a finale due to their remaining road games to close out the season. The fans did, though, and got so loud that Brady couldn't call a timeout with 0.2 seconds left to draw up an inbounds play to clench the victory. Luckily, the Herd got the ball in play and won anyway.

“Our fans were great, they were great all season long,” Brady said. “I think we have the best fans in the league. It's loud in there, it's energetic. They've been behind us the entire way. It was so loud that I was screaming as loud as I could for timeout on that final possession. I was trying to get a timeout there, (G League official William Mensah) couldn't hear me, I'm screaming at everybody and the fans were just excited. It was a great atmosphere, great energy.”

Every Herd player gave autographs to fans who waited after the clutch win as a thank you for their support all season. With the playoffs out of the picture there will be no more home games this season, but fans can catch the Herd's final contest Saturday on Facebook Live when Wisconsin takes on the Long Island Nets at 6 p.m.

UWO basketball coach to lead Wisconsin GLO

The Wisconsin GLO has named University of Wisconsin-Oshkosh women's basketball coach Brad Fischer as the team's general manager for its inaugural season of the Global Women's Basketball Association.

“Our owner is committed to creating a first-class experience for our players while supporting the development of women's basketball and women's athletics as a whole,”

Fischer

Fischer said in a statement. “As general manager it is my intention to build the best women's basketball team that has ever been assembled in Wisconsin. Despite the relative infancy of the team and our league, we will aggressively pursue the goal of being the best women's basketball team in the country shy of the WNBA.”

Fischer just completed his seventh year as head coach at UW-Oshkosh and led his teams to a 165-37 record and to the NCAA Division III Championship tournament five of the past six seasons.

Fischer was 2014 Central Region Coach of the Year from D3hoops.com and WIAC Coach of the Year in 2013, 2017 and 2019. This year's squad was the program's second to sweep the WIAC regular season and postseason titles.

Fox Valley Pro Basketball formed the team that will play eight games at the arena starting in May. The GLO also announced open tryouts for players from noon to 2 p.m. April 20 at Menominee Nation Arena, where the team will have its home court.

Eligible players must have exhausted college eligibility and be more than 21 years old.

Fischer can be contacted at brad@menomineenationarena.com for more information on joining the team.

Further survived by other relatives and many dear and loving friends.

Nicole believed "that life was like the wind; it comes and it goes" so she lived life to the fullest. Her greatest joy was her children, Ava and Ari; inspiring them to greatness, teaching them that love and compassion are not weaknesses but strengths that make us human and not to be afraid to try or take a risk. The world was a better place with Nicole in it. She will be missed by all who knew and loved her.

Services were held on Sunday, March 10, 2019. Private burial Woodlawn Cemetery. If desired, memorials to the Hirsch Family for Ava and Ari's education fund <https://www.gofundme.com/hirsch-family-fund?teamInvite>.

Two stages, two cities, one high school band

Lourdes musicians have been pulling double duty

Oshkosh Herald

Last week was a big one for the Lourdes Academy community. Not only did the boys basketball team make its way to the championship game, but the school musical was also hitting the stage at The Grand.

The “players” involved in both were the student musicians in the pep band for games who also performed in the orchestra pit and on stage for the theater production.

The crazy schedule started March 9 as the band hit the road on their one day off from musical rehearsal to support the basketball team the Neillsville sectional. The musical moved into The Grand the next day and held practices late into the evenings through Wednesday.

The orchestra performed Thursday morning as part of the musical and then loaded up and headed to Madison as the pep band for the boys semifinals. Even though they didn’t arrive back home until after midnight every student was in school Friday to be eligible to perform in that evening’s opening performance of “The Little Mermaid.”

After a few hours’ sleep they were back at school Saturday morning to load the buses and once again return to Madison to support their team in the championship game and then quickly load up to return for Saturday evening’s musical performance and finally wrap up their crazy week with a sold-out Sunday matinee.

Band director Michelle Sorenson said she couldn’t be more proud to be a teacher at Lourdes Academy.

“Our kids, and my band students in particular, have been incredible,” she said. “I haven’t seen this much school spirit and sense of community in a long time. It’s been great being able to witness the way the students have really supported each other in all areas. Basketball players, musicians and fans were all in it together that week.”

“Four of our lead actors in the show, as well as the entire pit orchestra and the rest of the Lourdes band, made up the pep band for the state basketball games.”

Sorenson said the students stayed focused.

“In musical rehearsals we knew we needed to feel things fit together quickly and we used that time to focus only on the musical,” she said. “In band rehearsals we focused on the pep band. We learned some new songs to freshen up our pep band choices for the big stage.”

She said the students took ownership of their own sense of school spirit in tangible ways by communicating times, events and dress-up themes while organizing all of the pep band music folders, drumline equipment and staging of the instruments for loading into the buses without being directed. She witnessed students knowing that in order to have the fun, there was work to be done and they happily stepped up to help.

Many of the musicians were also on double duty to practice and perform in the orchestra pit (below) for the musical production of “The Little Mermaid” staged at The Grand last weekend.
