District holds off on referendum

More comprehensive plan sought for Nov. 3 election

By Jack Tierney
OSHKOSH HERALD

The Oshkosh Area School District's Board of Education voted unanimously Thursday not to put forth a facilities improvement referendum for April while focusing on a more comprehensive plan to put before the public in November.

The pending referendum was a $24.5 million plan developed over six workshops among community members. It would have made safety, security and infrastructure improvements to schools, but was lacking in some areas board members thought needed improvement.

Superintendent Vickie Cartwright agreed with the board's decision to go in a different direction on a referendum while emphasizing the need for public support to fund much-needed building improvements.

"The capacity of some of our facilities is just too small," Cartwright said, noting that buildings in the district average 78 years old, past their advised life of 50 to 60 years.

Board member Liz Szilagyi said that as a former teacher she thinks consolidation, which would likely involve new construc-

Firms perform well with export sales;
proposed tariffs could stifle growth

By Sean Fitzgerald
HERALD CONTRIBUTOR

For a smaller-sized community, selling Oshkosh-made goods outside of the United States is big business here.

The Oshkosh-Neenah metropolitan statistical area encompassing most of Winnebago County typically ranks among the top third of the nearly 400 metro areas in the country for export sales. In recent history, the region has been the third or fourth largest exporting community in Wisconsin behind the greater Milwaukee and Madison metro regions, and occasionally changing places with Racine.

During 2018, the most recent year in which data is available from the U.S. Department of Commerce, Oshkosh firms logged $1.13 billion in sales abroad, representing almost 7 percent of all exports from Wisconsin.

"We certainly want to encourage more international trade," said Jason White, president and chief executive of Greater Oshkosh Economic Development Corp., whose organization assists local businesses seek out technical and financial support to navigate the maze of challenges associated with selling abroad.

In the four-year span between 2014 and 2017, international sales out of Oshkosh and Neenah grew by 55 percent, representing the fastest rate of export growth across the state, according to White.

Unfortunately, tariffs can have an adverse effect on local manufacturer's export activities, and the current federal climate imposing tariffs is a potential threat to Oshkosh manufacturers. When manufacturers suddenly need to pay more for the raw materials like steel and alumi-

Officer cited with check for charities

Oshkosh Police Officer Mike Wissink was honored with a check for more than $10,000 Friday that will support two law enforcement charities through a student fundraiser at Oshkosh West High School.

Wissink was praised for his actions during a school safety incident at Oshkosh West High School in December where he was injured along with a student accused of attacking him at the school.

The funds were raised through a T-shirt campaign organized by junior John Weigand to honor the actions of the school's resource officer. The fundraiser was made possible with help from Panske Enterprises, a local screen printing shop.

"I am so grateful for the outpouring of support from the Oshkosh community and the incredible success of this fundraiser is truly humbling," Wissink said in a statement. "John's leadership, along with

Council OKs projects, event fees

By Tom Ekvall
HERALD CONTRIBUTOR

The MToxins Venom Lab received approval from the Common Council last Tuesday to operate at 717 Oregon St. after unanimous approval of a zoning change at that location from a central mixed use district to one with a specific implementation plan for the business planning to open in May.

The venom lab is one of six such establishments in the nation and will feature an educational component for school visits as part of the operations.

The owner, Nathaniel Frank, said the facility will produce venom from poisonous snakes and spiders to be used for pharma research, antivenom and other research projects to save lives of those who have been bitten.

Planning Director Mark Lyons told the council that his staff had not come up with such a project in developing the zoning codes before and that the approved measures will allow him to conduct business at the former Kossel's Appliance Store. The approvals will allow as a base standard modification the use of light manufacturing and educational purposes at the business.

Council members also approved a tax increment financing (TIF) district for the former St. Francis Cabrini elementary school, adjacent to Most Blessed Sacrament/St. Mary's Catholic Church, that will enable Northpointe Development to create a 35-room senior living facility.

Developers Andy Dumke and Cal Schultz plan to seek state tax credits that will be used to build the new senior housing this year and then come back before the council with specific plans for construction.

The council later voted against supporting a League of Wisconsin Municipalities' effort to oppose a Senate bill that would limit the amount of cash grants available to a TIF district developer. The bill has since failed to gain the needed support.

After considerable discussion, the council also approved a resolution setting fees to be paid to the city for special events, marches and public assemblies. The costs include hourly charges for city staff involved with the events and equipment rates for those used in such events.

The equipment rates would be 75 percent of Federal Emergency Management Agency rates established by the government and hourly rates would be based on a "direct" benefit cost, which includes Social Security, Medicare, retirement and a general administrative fee of 10 percent in addition to wages.

The council originally adopted the special events fee in March 2010. At the Jan. 14 meeting, members debated how to best set fees for 2020 and beyond.

As part of its consent agenda, the council also approved a specific implementation plan by developer Steve Hoopman for development of the proposed 103-unit TownPlace Suites by Marriott hotel at 1365 N. Westfield St. near the Oshkosh Corp. global headquarters.

Ex-UWO officials plead guilty, agree to pay fine

By Miles Maguire
HERALD CONTRIBUTOR

The former chancellor of the University of Wisconsin Oshkosh and one of his top aides pleaded guilty last week to a single count of felony misconduct in office with each accepting a $5,000 fine and promising to pay $70,000 apiece in restitution to settle the criminal case against them.

Former Chancellor Richard H. Wells, 72, and former Vice Chancellor Thomas G. Sonnleitner, 79, had faced a total of five felony counts that could have netted them $50,000 in fines and nearly 18 years in prison. They were accused of illegally providing loan guarantees from the university to the UW Oshkosh foundation to support five real estate projects. The one count they pleaded guilty to was related to the Best Western Premier Waterfront Hotel and Convention Center, which has been a financial success for the foundation.

In accepting the plea agreement Wednesday, Winnebago County Judge John A. Jorgensen expressed sympathy for the legal arguments advanced by the defendants.

Campus leaders at the time of the misdeeds in this case were forced to look for creative responses to budget cutbacks, he said. He also noted that the UW System's universities and related foundations often worked very closely together and that what the two Oshkosh officials did "seemed to be a practice throughout the state."

He referred to a defense memorandum that described 2,000 transactions from UW System schools to their foundations between 2011 and 2016 that came to $25 million. Campuses that passed money to their foundations include UW-Madison, UW-Milwaukee, UW-Platteville and UW-Superior, the memo shows. These figures undercut the prosecution's consistent argument that state money can never flow outward to a private foundation.

Neither Wells nor Sonnleitner was ever accused of putting any money into their own pockets. Assistant Attorney General W. Richard Chiapete said the two men were motivated by a "zeal for public recognition and personal achievement rather than that of a personal gain or personal greed."

He said the felony conviction meant "a significant stain on the reputation of both of these men."

Raymond M. Dall'Osto, the former chancellor's attorney, said he wanted to take the case to trial but was overruled by his client. One factor was the rising cost of legal services, already "in the six figures," Dall'Osto said.

Wells was also reluctant to mount a full-throated defense, Dall'Osto told the court, because the former chancellor did not want to speak out against UW Oshkosh or its officials.

"A directive by Mr. Wells to me throughout this case in interacting with the press was never to talk against the people at the university (or UW System) because they're doing their jobs," Dall'Osto said. "His loyalty to the University of (Wisconsin) Oshkosh and to the Oshkosh community is great."

In contrast, UW System Board of Re-

agents President Andrew S. Petersen, in his description of the former Oshkosh officials in a victim impact statement, said "the criminal acts of these former administrators" had resulted in significant adversity for the school.

"For the last several years, the institution's financial future, strategic planning, recruitment efforts and public persona has (sic) been impeded and impugned by an institutional legacy of 'unethical behavior and bad acts,'" Petersen said.

He identified eight specific impacts that resulted from the criminal case, including "in excess of 250 media and public record requests for information," a threat to the school's accreditation status, a disruption in fundraising, staff turnover and "the loss of the chancellor's residence."

Although the state said Wells and Sonnleitner transferred about $30 million between the university and the foundation, their lawyers argued that this exaggerated the effect of their actions and that this amount of money was never at risk.

On one occasion the two men "improperly forgave a foundation loan in the amount of $289,362," a defense memo states. But in the same time period, the foundation forwarded $5.6 million to the university. Thus, without the forgiveness, the foundation could have easily repaid the $289,362 and still donated $5.3 million.

Despite the criminal case against them, Wells and Sonnleitner continue to enjoy considerable support among the school's major backers, including restaurant chain founder Craig Culver and Bill Wyman, chairman of the Oshkosh Area Community Foundation, both of whom put their names on letters that were included in the court file.

As part of his sentencing memo, Wells also included reference letters from two former chancellors, Petra Roter, who served on an interim basis, and Edward Penson, for whom one of the school's major teaching awards is named.

In addition to the hotel, the other projects that were part of the criminal case were two biodigesters, a stadium complex and a conference/welcome center.

Restitution will go to the UW System, with half the money due by the end of this year and half due at the end of 2021.

"Defendant Sonnleitner, living on a fixed income, will need to gut or otherwise seriously impair his retirement account to satisfy this debt," a defense memo said. "The state has reviewed the defendant's sworn financial statement and agrees with this characterization."

At the end of the hourlong hearing, the state attempted to extend the length of time that Wells and Sonnleitner will be without their right to vote due to their felony conviction. "It is the only hook we have" to make sure restitution is paid, Chiapete said.

After Sonnleitner's attorney Steven M. Biskupic objected, noting the strong character references both defendants had received, Jorgensen rejected the state's request and said their voting rights will be restored as soon as their fines are paid.

Much of the commentary after the hearing focused on the need to move beyond the foundation saga.

"Today's guilty pleas are the result of a three-year process to bring about public accountability, while affording UW Oshkosh the ability to renew its focus on its students and mission," regent Petersen said in a prepared statement. "We are gratified that DOJ and UW System's efforts resulted in restitution and acknowledgment of misconduct in office by former UW Oshkosh officials."

"Today marks the end of a long, difficult chapter for the University of Wisconsin Oshkosh," said Chancellor Andrew J. Leavitt. "Everyone is moving forward."

"I'm glad they can put this in the past," said UW Oshkosh Foundation Chairman Timothy Mulloy, referring to Wells and Sonnleitner. "It's time to look to the future."

Resolve to make difference in new year

By Andrew Leavitt
OSHKOSH AREA UNITED WAY CAMPAIGN CO-CHAIR

The New Year is upon us, and with it come resolutions.

We are inundated with messaging about how we can improve our lives, eat better, look better, work out better, be better.

We jot down lists of how we will improve and what steps to take to get there. Some of us will carry these resolutions throughout the year, and some will abandon them in a few months' time.

This year we challenge you to make a new kind of resolution: Resolve to help improve the lives of those around you.

Our community has a poverty rate of 18.8 percent, while 46 percent of residents live under the ALICE (Asset Limited, Income Constrained and Employed) threshold. The statistics are staggering, however, the opportunities to help through the United Way are unlimited. And the benefits often reflect back to the donor.

Perhaps you have time to dedicate to a specific cause. Research shows that you will be lifting up yourself, too. Participating in voluntary services significantly correlates with improved mental and physical health, including but not limited to life satisfaction, self-esteem, happiness, depression levels and mortality rates.

You will find plenty of opportunities to give your time and life-sustaining donations of necessary basic need items through VolunteerOshkosh.org. All of these volunteer opportunities — time, talent, treasure — are ways you can improve the lives of our neighbors in need and at the same time, lift your own spirit.

Happy New Year from our team to you and yours.

Gift to UWO establishes professorship

The University of Wisconsin Oshkosh Foundation was gifted $1.9 million by Dr. Kenneth J. Grieb to establish the Kenneth J. Grieb Professorship. The permanent endowment named for the longtime professor who died in July 2018 will support professional scholarship through research and related expenses.

"Dr. Grieb was intentional in creating this endowment," Jessica King, donor advisory fund member and Grieb's attorney, said in a statement. "He believed in philanthropy and finding ways to ensure this great work continues and opportunities are afforded to those who are inspired by it."

Grieb began his teaching career at UW Oshkosh in 1966 and in 1968 began serving as the international studies coordinator and faculty adviser for its Model United Nations Team. He spent the majority of his career engaging students interested in the study of political, economic, social and cultural issues from an interdisciplinary, global perspective.

The fund will support research and course development within the International Studies Program's Topical Emphasis including African, Asian and Latin studies.

In late 2019, the foundation also received a $1 million gift from the Culver Family Foundation for the Alumni Welcome and Conference Center, as well as a $150,000 gift from the John and Patricia Kerrigan estate.

"Designating this gift to the foundation was a thoughtful and considerate way to ensure our future leaders are prepared and to carry on the legacy Dr. Grieb was known for among his peers and students," said Bob Roberts, vice chancellor.

United Way awards community grants

The Oshkosh Area United Way has awarded 37 Community Investment Grants for the 2020 calendar year, which are available to area organizations that offer programming to impact mental health, childhood development and living-wage initiatives.

Each application was reviewed to ensure the program is in solid financial standing. Once approved, the applicant is welcomed to participate in a panel interview with the Community Investment committee, composed of more than 50 volunteers to ensure funding is awarded to programs making a strong difference in the community.

Go to www.oshkoshunitedway.org/blog to see a list of the programs awarded.

City voters face 1 in 10 chance of legal challenge

By Miles Maguire
HERALD CONTRIBUTOR

The Wisconsin Election Commission has sent mailings to almost 3,500 Oshkosh voters questioning their eligibility to vote based on official address records, and it has taken another 229 residents off the rolls because they have registered to vote in another state.

The questioned voters represent 10 percent of the city's total registrations as of last April's election, according to the city's website.

That percentage figure is inflated by the fact that many of those voters are university students, said Pamela Ubrig, Oshkosh city clerk. Under current law students are required to reregister every time they move — even if it is just across the hall in the same dormitory.

Because Oshkosh is home to a major state university with many students who rarely stay in the same place for their entire undergraduate careers, it is also home to many registered voters whose polling addresses regularly go out of date.

The letters from the WEC, which went out in August, were based on information it received from a multistate organization that flags discrepancies in address records given to various government agencies. The letters included instructions for voters to rectify the situation, either by confirming their current addresses or by reregistering at a new address.

According to the WEC, the discrepancies may arise for a variety of reasons. Many of them are likely the result of a voter moving to a new address, but some occur when, for example, a car owner registers a vehicle in a different jurisdiction to avoid a local wheel tax.

Across the state, the letters went to 232,579 voters whose address records had been called into question. For almost 75 percent of the mailings, 169,491 to be precise, election officials received no response.

The post office returned 60,676 as undeliverable, and 2,412 voters requested continuation at their commission-listed address. These numbers are based on data released Dec. 20 by the WEC.

Last year the mailings became the subject of a lawsuit by the Wisconsin Institute for Law & Liberty, a conservative non-profit organization that frequently aligns itself with Republican policy initiatives.

WILL has won a court ruling that the state must remove voters from the election rolls based on the results of the August mailing. But the state has appealed, arguing that the provision of law at issue applies to local clerks and not the election commission.

The WEC has six commissioners, three Republicans and three Democrats. Because of this split, it has not passed a motion on how to proceed on what is known as the "movers mailing list."

The case is expected to end up before the Wisconsin Supreme Court. In the meantime, the city clerk is collecting information from the mailing but not removing anyone from the rolls.

"Because the election commission has not decided what to do with those voters, what we're doing is just documenting the action of it," Ubrig said. "We're going to wait to hear from the election commission what action we need to follow."

City-level figures are not available, but for all of Winnebago County, the WEC said 6,956 letters went out, 36 came back with requests for continuation on the voting rolls and 846 were deemed undeliverable. There was no response for the other 6,095 mailings.

Republicans have been accused of engaging in voter suppression by pushing for the elimination of voters from the official rolls. Party officials say they are not trying to discourage anyone from voting.

"We should encourage more people to vote, and they should actually live in the municipality they're voting in," said Joann Borlee, campaign chairman for the Winnebago County Republican Party. "I don't know why there are so many names on the rolls of people who can't vote here. But those names should be removed."

The League of Women Voters, which has filed a federal lawsuit to block the removal of voters based on the movers mailing list, argues that the process the commission used has significant flaws.

Margy Davey, president of the league's Winnebago County chapter, said a big problem is the use of the postal service to contact voters at a time when many people rely on electronic communications and pay little attention to the mail.

Young people in particular "might look in (their mailbox) once a week and then throw half of the stuff away," she said. "Simply sending a letter to a person's last known address may not be the best and only way to verify that is still their abode."

She pointed to the widespread use of social media and other alternatives for sending messages.

"There are so many ways to communicate; there is no way to know what is the best way to communicate with any single individual," she said.

The league is about to embark on a public education campaign through the county's library systems to encourage voters to verify their registration status.

Similarly, Ubrig said voters who are not sure about whether they are registered to vote should feel free to contact her office.

"Voters can go out on the state website to see if they are registered," she said. "Or they can call our office. We are more than happy to quick punch their name into the system to see where they're at."

The state website for checking voter registration is <https://myvote.wi.gov/en-us/MyVoterInfo>. The city clerk's telephone number is 920-236-5011.

Kemp investment seminars return

Local resident Jeff Kemp is bringing his series of lessons on the fundamentals of investing back to the community starting next month. His annual Adventures In Investing classes will begin at 6 p.m. Feb. 4 at the Oshkosh Seniors Center.

Kemp said it has become increasingly important to make fundamentally sound decisions with the money being saved and invested, not just to reach financial goals but to avoid scams and bad advice.

Classes will be held every Tuesday through March 17 and are offered free by Kemp as a community service. Lessons will be of interest for both beginning investors and seasoned investors.

Kemp said last year's turnout was large enough to move it to the largest room available at the Seniors Center. All ages are welcome, but sign-ups are asked by calling 232-5300.

Mirrorless Productions puts clients in motion

By Jack Tierney
OSHKOSH HERALD

When social media started to become a primary platform for people to get information, a market opened up.

Businesses recognized that and turned to service companies like Mirrorless Productions, 136 Jackson St., to create content that would draw the attention of people using social media.

Mirrorless Productions specializes in making “mini movies” to be used as advertisements on social media and to catch the attention of people scrolling through an endless feed of information.

Mirrorless writes scripts, edits video and uses a staff of individuals who are trained to tell visual stories.

Their work in 2019 led them to contracts at the Super Bowl, as well as commercials for Jeep and Mazda.

They do not only make advertisements, however. They will make special content for individuals. If an individual, say a high school sports star, wanted to make a highlight reel of their abilities and strengths, Mirrorless would be able to do that.

Even more, the company can be hired to take photos at special events like weddings.

“We’re a video production company that creates mini-movies for businesses, brands, artists and NFL athletes,” owner Alex Belville said. “We also offer photography and brand consultation services. We consider ourselves filmmakers first and foremost, but have a strong passion for marketing.”

“We push our clients to be bold and create fast-paced videos that feel like short films, but serve as advertisements for social media,” he said. “We focus on storytelling versus selling. We make movie trailers that highlight what your business or brand does and stands for.”

For more information and to view some of the work, go to mirrorlessprod.com.

UW Oshkosh MBA students excel

Twenty-three University of Wisconsin Oshkosh master of business administration (MBA) students recently finished in the top 2 percentile on the national Educational Testing Services (ETS) fall business exam.

The ETS Major Field Test for the MBA consists of 124 multiple-choice questions that require knowledge of specific information drawn from marketing, management, finance and managerial accounting and strategic integration.

The MBA program consistently has ranked in the top 2 percent in the last five years. College of Business Dean Barbara Rau said that measuring student’s competency is a key component of maintaining their Association to Advance Collegiate Schools of Business (AACSB) accreditation.

“AACSB is the most prestigious accreditation a university can achieve for business education. The ETS is one of the only ways to demonstrate the learning outcomes of our students and how well they have mastered business knowledge while in their MBA program relative to students from around the world,” Rau said.

AACSB Accreditation, the hallmark of business education, has been earned by less than 6 percent of the world’s business schools. The College of Business at UW Oshkosh is the only one in northeastern Wisconsin that offers both undergraduate and graduate degrees accredited by the AACSB International.

Rau said that requiring competency in all business functions is another factor in the MBA students’ success on the test.

“Not all business schools are created equal. Other programs might allow you to graduate without experience in human resources, management information systems, supply chain management, etc. Our students leave with a wide comprehension of all content areas—not all schools share this feature in their curriculum,” she said.

Park restroom damages reported at Menominee

Vandalism discovered Jan. 10 at Menominee Park caused an estimated $5,000 worth of damage to the women’s restroom near the train depot, according to police.

Visitors often enthralled by simplest of offerings

By Tom Willadsen
HERALD CONTRIBUTOR

Summer is coming, which means you may be entertaining guests who have never visited Wisconsin before. There are some obvious sites that your guests may expect to see: the Experimental Aircraft Association Museum, the Harley-Davidson factory, the Farmers' Market at the Capitol, the Packers Hall of Fame.

Ten years ago I stumbled on a place that more than anywhere else gave my guests a true Wisconsin experience.

Friends from Manhattan visited us one summer. This was a payback of sorts. They had shown us the wonders of New York City the summer before. We loved visiting the American Museum of Natural History, having seen "Night at the Museum." We took in a game at Yankee Stadium. We rode the subway everywhere.

They took us out for New York style pizza. (In the words of Bob Dylan, this was not our cup of meat. "Tom, if you fold it like this hardly any grease will drip onto your shirt." "Thanks, I'm going with a salad.") As we waited to ride the Staten Island Ferry a pigeon pooped on one of my sons. They truly showed us all that New York City has to offer.

When they came to Oshkosh the next summer, our friends marveled at the EAA museum. They found lots of things there to engage physically active boys. When we took them out for pizza they were puzzled to find the pieces cut into squares that didn't bend like clocks in that Salvador Dali painting. You could see their horizons expanding. "This is good, and you hardly need any napkins!"

Toward the end of a long day I stopped in Fleet Farm; my friends tagged along. Their eyes were as big as hub caps when we got inside. They had never seen anything like Fleet Farm.

Actually, their wonder started in the parking lot. The only place they knew with that much open space was Central Park. "Acres of parking" is a phrase one does not use in Manhattan. They got a cart and stopped dead when they realized that the aisles are wide enough for carts to pass each other. The nearest store to them was too small for even one shopping cart. The "supermarket" they shopped at is a claustrophobic's nightmare. At Fleet Farm they could spread out. I caught them ambling. After just a few days in the Dairy State, they were shedding their urban armor. I thought they would never leave.

They bought a CD of the greatest funk hits of the '80s and '90s, a fleece vest, a T-shirt extolling the "The Man's Mall," new sneakers for the boys, Swiss army knives, cans of nuts and bags of candy and a duffle bag to carry their treasures home.

We trolled every aisle in the store. We lit a candle at The Shrine to Duct Tape. "They have everything here; if Fleet Farm doesn't have it, you don't need it." I told them.

The highlight of our shopping spree came in the veterinary aisle. "Conan, where do you buy bovine pharmaceuticals on the upper west side of Manhattan? You can get anything you need right here!"

(You can live a long, long time and never say "Where do you buy bovine pharmaceuticals on the upper west side of Manhattan?")

I know, I know — there are historic sites of national significance and parks with vistas and beautiful landscapes, but if you want your guests to really experience Wisconsin, take them to Fleet Farm.

Tom Willadsen moved to Nebraska last fall. He sends this piece as a fond reminder of his years in Wisconsin.

Darren Moxon picks up his boxes of undergarments for delivery to an Oshkosh school.

Foundation chair. "Many children don't have the proper clothing while attending school, and we can make a difference, in a small way, for the children in our community."

All of the money raised was used to purchase the undergarments.

"The club has elected to make this program an annual community project and we hope next year we will be able to raise enough funding support to help all our schools within the Oshkosh School District," said Kiwanis President Dr. Brittany Bartel. "There is also a need to assist our middle schools and high schools as well."

Area workers eligible for retraining, support grants

The Fox Valley Workforce Development Board (FVWDB) is offering assistance to anyone laid off from a retail store, warehouse or call center through its administration of a National Dislocated Retail Grant from the U.S. Department of Labor.

With up to $15,000 in retraining and $15,000 in support, including mileage, books, child care and payments to cover mortgage or rent while taking classes, the board is focusing on people recently laid off by local or national retailers who have either shut their doors or no longer need seasonal workers after the holidays.

"This is an incredibly generous grant from the Department of Labor, which aims to train individuals for roles in sectors as varied as manufacturing, IT, health care, and transportation and get them off the retail roller coaster," said Anthony Snyder, FVWDB chief executive. "Imagine a good-paying career with nights, weekends and holidays off, paid sick time and health care. There's never been a better time to leave the retail sector behind.

"Retail stores continue to make up a huge part of our local economy, but it's clear that the long-term future of many retail roles simply isn't there."

The FVWDB has financial resources available through its Dislocated Worker Program. Anyone who has been laid off from an employer is encouraged to visit the Menasha or Fond du Lac job centers for evaluation of programs available to meet employment needs. For more information, visit <https://foxvalleyjobcenters.com/>, call 920-968-6373 or text 920-850-2032.

Kiwanis, partners raise funds for clothing

Members of the Mid-Morning Kiwanis Club of Oshkosh recently helped children at 12 elementary schools with its Project Undercover winter project.

The initiative, sponsored by Mid-Morning and Noon-Kiwanis clubs, partnered with the J.J. Keller Foundation, West Side Association, Shea Electric and the Oshkosh Herald to purchase about 4,900 undergarments for children attending schools in disadvantaged areas of the community. Clothing was distributed to the children last week at the schools.

"Our goal again this year was to raise as much support and provide, free of charge, as many undergarments to our children in need," said Colleen Harvot, Kiwanis

County receives hazard mitigation planning grant

Winnebago County Emergency Management has received a hazard mitigation planning update grant from the Federal Emergency Management Agency.

The goal of the grant, administered through Wisconsin Emergency Management, is to update an approvable plan that outlines potential hazard mitigation activities, some of which might be available for future grant funding. The plan looks at the risks and vulnerabilities the county faces from natural disaster and highlights strategies that might reduce future losses.

Eric Rasmussen, deputy director for Winnebago County Emergency Management, is assembling a workgroup to review and guide the planning activities.

"I am very excited about this part of the planning process," Rasmussen said in a media statement. "The input from the workgroup can have long-lasting impacts, making Winnebago County safer and more disaster resistant."

He said all interested members of the community have an opportunity to provide input into the plan and can contact him at 920-236-7464 for more information.

Legal Action moves to new office

Legal Action of Wisconsin's Oshkosh office has opened its new location at 300 Ohio St., one of six state offices that provide free legal aid to low-income clients in 39 counties.

Oshkosh is the home office for clients from Winnebago, Adams, Fond du Lac, Green Lake, Marquette, Outagamie, Ozaukee, Sheboygan, Washington and Waushara counties.

"This relocation will make our services more accessible to the communities we help," said executive director Deedee Peerson. "The new office is entirely on the ground floor, making it more accessible, and is near public transit routes and the courthouse."

Since 1968, Legal Action of Wisconsin is a nonprofit law firm that has been providing free civil legal aid to marginalized and low-income individuals and families throughout Wisconsin. The group's work is funded by public and private sources, including the federally funded Legal Services Corp., and has hundreds of active volunteer attorneys.

Mr. Panske's generosity, allowed our community to come together and support one another during a time of need. These individuals are my heroes. And all those who participated in the fundraiser shows just how amazing the Oshkosh community is."

"Thank you to the entire Oshkosh community and beyond for the cards, gifts, well wishes, and prayers," Wissink added. "Thank you for the support you have given to the Oshkosh Police Department, Oshkosh West High School, and the Oshkosh Area School District. And most importantly, thank you to all Oshkosh West students and their families, as well as the Oshkosh West staff, for the unbelievable amount of support we have received."

Proceeds will be donated to Team Blue Line, a nonprofit foundation that helps families of law enforcement officers who have given their lives in the line of duty, and the Wisconsin Law Enforcement Officers Association Memorial Campground.

Referendum

tion and closing of some older schools, is the best plan for the future and for teachers without compromising student-teacher ratios in any significant way.

Deputy Superintendent David Gundlach said that no matter how many students are consolidated into one school from another, the class sizes would be better.

Cartwright said consolidation is necessary because behavioral interventionists and other specialty jobs at the schools are not hired for one location as of now. She said that could have negative impact on a student who needs to see an interventionist that day and can't wait until later because of the way the school policy is currently situated.

"Referendum fatigue" was something the board members spoke about often over this process.

They worried about the community becoming upset from having to vote on a third referendum in six years — especially with the latest approach of offering a $24.5 million referendum deal, which would be about five times less money than the referendums the Fond du Lac district approved last year and Neenah's district is proposing in April.

Board members said it would be best to come back to the public with a different plan that can be voted on once and cover the needed ground.

The estimate for the overall package from the Facilities Advisory Committee, who guided most of the development of the package, was $107.4 million. That package is likely to show up on the Nov. 3 ballot, board members said, and include consolidation plans as well as rebuilding/modernization and upgrades. For tax purposes it would cost $98 annually for a home valued at $100,000 over 20 years, committee members said.

The Nov. 3 ballot is the national election for U.S. president and other national, state and local races. Board members said that would help draw more voters and give them time for more information to work from.

Reconfiguring the schools would have changed the number of elementary schools from 13 to 9 and middle schools from 5 to 3.

Safety improvements would have been a $9.25 million upgrade to the high school electrical systems, $2.6 million improvements to the communications systems and $9.34 million to reconfigure offices and entrance areas, among other areas.

Gundlach said the numbers would not likely change much between now and November. He suggested district residents visit the school district website to see more detailed plans of the development project or contact school officials with questions.

Board members are hoping to hear from the community so that they can finalize a plan that can gain a consensus. They will be presenting their ideas at various events until the next election ballot.

Exports

annual report. While the report didn't say the price increase was specifically attributed to foreign tariffs, the company — which did about $1.35 billion in exports out of its entire $8.4 billion receipts during fiscal 2019 — did acknowledge the tariffs potential to adversely affect Oshkosh Corp.'s financial performance.

White said while some tariffs may be intended to help American businesses, they ultimately make it more difficult for companies to compete in a global market.

"Are these tariffs on all these various countries going to interrupt the momentum on our international sales?" White asked.

Hopefully not. Roughly 95 percent of the world's purchasing power comes from outside of the U.S., noted Shirley Malski, the former international business manager for the Small Business Development Center located at the University of Wisconsin Oshkosh. Her newly established consulting firm, Wisconsin International Trade Center, helps small to midsized businesses capture sales growth by reaching out to emerging foreign markets.

"Our businesses (across Wisconsin) have been hurt by these tariffs — not just manufacturing — but agriculture as well," Malski said. "But I haven't seen a lot of our businesses be real vocal about tariffs, which is probably due to the conservative nature of people from Wisconsin."

One tariff-related measure approved last week by Congress is the U.S.-Mexico-Canada Agreement (NAFTA) that has been in place since 1994.

The new agreement offers a host of benefits for Wisconsin businesses, including one provision that would grant Wisconsin dairy farmers greater access to the Canadian market.

For Oshkosh area companies interested in learning more about business opportunities abroad, the Tech Council Innovation Network is hosting a lunch event at Fox Valley Technical College in Appleton on Feb. 4 beginning at noon. The speaker will be Katy Sinnott, vice president of international business development for the Wisconsin Economic Development Corp. More information is at wisconsintechcouncil.com.

Gavin Meyers performed well at the recent Blue-Gray All-American Bowl in Atlanta.

Lourdes punter does well at All-Star game in Atlanta

By Dustin Riese
HERALD CONTRIBUTOR

The Lourdes football team had a historic football season as they left the community with plenty of memories. Not only did it set a school record with 12 wins, but also advanced to Level Four in the playoffs for the first time in program history.

With all those memories, one is not a team memory but a personal one as senior punter Gavin Meyers put an exclamation point on what was an amazing season. That stamp was finalized last Monday at the Mercedes Benz Stadium in Atlanta where Meyers was selected to participate in the Blue-Gray All-American Bowl.

Meyers has spent a lot of time working to become a better punter, so being chosen for this event was icing on the cake.

"It was an honor to be chosen for the game," Meyers said. "This was a goal that I had been working toward for a long time so to see it come true was really fulfilling."

Being mentioned or nominated for this game is an accomplishment in itself, but playing in the actual event is another story. Meyers not only played but performed well. He punted the ball eight times for an average of 45 yards with a long of 61. He also had three punts downed inside the 10-yard line.

"I felt I punted extremely well," he said. "I punted effectively in different situations. In the short field game, I placed three punts inside the 10, and when needed, I hit four punts over 47 yards including a 61-yard punt. I also held the punt return unit to 2 total return yards on 8 punts."

Not only was Meyers regarded as one of the best punters in the state, but one of the best in the nation. For the season he didn't have to punt much given the amount of scoring the Knights generated. Meyers punted the ball 12 times for an average of 36.6 yards with four pinned inside the 10.

Plenty of colleges, including Division 1 programs, are looking at adding Meyers and his leg to their program. He has made the decision to play at the next level and will chose before Feb. 5, which is National Signing Day.

Balanced scoring helps Titans rout Falcons

By Dustin Riese
HERALD CONTRIBUTOR

After enduring one of the nation's toughest nonconference schedules, the University of Wisconsin Oshkosh men's basketball team appears to be finding its groove now that Wisconsin Intercollegiate Athletic Conference play is in full swing.

Tied atop of the league standings with three other teams entering Saturday, the Titans used a variety of runs and balanced scoring from five double-digit scorers led by Adam Fravert and Jack Flynn's 19 points to rout UW-River Falls, 89-62.

"I thought we competed really hard especially on the defensive end tonight," head coach Matt Lewis said. "We chart contested shots, and even though we haven't watched film, I feel like we had one of our better efforts in terms of contesting shots all game."

"Any time you play River Falls it comes down to finishing your shots and rebounding. I thought our guys did a great job finishing the shots they put up and battling for the rebounds on the other end. They just did a great job on both ends of the floor tonight."

The balanced scoring of the Titans was in full effect early as all five starters were on the board helping the Titans race out to a 17-8 lead. Then River Falls started to get in its flow offensively as Noah Hanson and Julian Jackson carried the team in the first half despite a horrible shooting performance from three. After a Jack Stensgard three to cut things to 25-20, Flynn began to impose his will on the inside helping the Titans build their lead to 34-24.

Hanson and Austin Werdin of the Falcons cut the lead to single digits before Will Mahoney, Flynn and Eddie Muench closed out the half in a big way as the Titans took a 43-34 lead into the break led by 15 points from Flynn.

The Titans wasted no time putting the game away early in the second half, using a 20-6 run sparked by a pair of Fravert three's and some additional help. Although it looked like the team made some adjustments, Lewis didn't think his team did too much differently.

"We didn't really adjust too many things at halftime, but instead we re-emphasized our keys on what makes us tick," he said. "It all comes down to if you believe in the plan you have in place. Although it was working well in the first half, we just must come out of the locker room and be recommitted to some of those things. We had some slip-ups at the end of first half, so at halftime it was more about getting recommitted to what we do best and starting off strong."

River Falls shot only 21.7 percent from deep, which was a big reason for its struggling offense.

Mahoney, Flynn, Fravert, Borchert and Eric Peterson all scored in double figures on the night with Muench adding nine before rolling his ankle in the second half. With a large focus of the Titans offense relying on Fravert and Flynn, this type of

Titans women get back on track with win at River Falls

After dropping two straight games, the University of Wisconsin Oshkosh women's basketball team got back on track with a big 64-47 win over UW-River Falls in a Wisconsin Intercollegiate Athletic Conference game on the road Saturday.

The Titans (9-7, 2-3 WIAC) never trailed in the game as it never dominated, but slowly built leads after getting a lot of balance from their team as 11 players made the box score.

The Titans held UW-River Falls to just 34 percent shooting and outrebounded them 42-31. WIAC leading scorer Leah Porath led the Titans with 16 points and nine rebounds while Nikki Arneson was the other Titan to find double digits as she scored 10 points.

Karsyn Rueth added nine and Emily Higgins chipped in eight points for UWO, which shot 41 percent in the win while struggling from deep, going 5-for-21.

balanced attack makes this Titans team that much tougher to defend.

"We constantly talk about being great teammates and selfless individuals," Lewis said. "We just want the ball to move around a lot on offense, so we don't get caught up too much with whose scoring and who isn't. One thing we do emphasize is throwing the ball in the post and working the offense through the post. We have a variety of guys who we can throw the ball into, so I think the players just really buy into what we try to do offensively."

Now 10-6 on the season, the Titans have won three straight WIAC games to remain in first place at 4-1. After starting the year 6-5 during their nonconference slate, Lewis is happy to see the improvements in recent weeks.

"Obviously we were not happy with some of the results earlier this season, but we learned a lot from those games," he said. "We played one of the toughest schedules in the country and we had to learn quite a bit early on. I think we did that, and we are starting to play better basketball because of that. I am excited to see where this group can go the next few weeks."

The Titans will be back on the court tonight when they host UW-Stevens Point in a battle for first place. Both teams are tied atop the standings along with UW-Platteville.

Herd record is second best ever at 25 games

Retooling of team and staff shows results

By Ti Windisch
HERALD CONTRIBUTOR

The Wisconsin Herd beat the Erie Bayhawks 139-120 on Thursday afternoon, and reached rare air with the victory. The team's 20-5 record through 25 games is the second-best mark ever posted by any G League team.

The 2015 Sioux Falls Skyforce went 21-4 through 25 games, posting the best start ever. The 2019 Herd is now tied with the 2007 Idaho Stampede and 2009 Iowa Energy, who both also won 20 of their first 25 games.

These winning ways are a massive departure from the Herd's first two seasons, in which Wisconsin went 21-29 and 12-38. Herd general manager Dave Dean said the incredible turnaround has been due to a combination of factors, and a complete overhaul at the G League level.

"We revamped basically everything we did," Dean said. "The way we approached the offseason started with our coaching staff and it was far from their fault. Our personnel on the floor wasn't good enough and we knew that and remapped our front office structure. We looked in the mirror and said, 'What do we need to do better?'"

In addition to a new front office approach, the decision to replace Jordan Brady with Chase Buford has worked out nicely for the Herd so far. Dean praised his new coach, and said he's simply a natural when it comes to running a team.

"The thing I've been most impressed with, with him is just his control of every aspect of the game," Dean said. "He's mature beyond his years as a head coach I think. He's done a great job surrounding himself with a great staff. I think Chase has a really bright future as a head coach."

When asked about his team's historic start, Buford credited both his staff and his players, saying he has been able to rely on a large cast of contributors all season long.

"It doesn't matter who every night, it just seems like someone new steps up that maybe hadn't been in the rotation," Buford said. "And I think that's a credit to the work our staff does with those guys, keeping them ready every day. But we got a great group of guys in there that want to play together. They enjoy competing and, you know, more times than not we came out and we competed and left it on the floor."

In the latest Herd win, a familiar few faces had huge outings. Dragan Bender was down from Milwaukee to start at center, and he shined, posting 23 points, five rebounds and two steals. Jaylen Adams got the start as the sole point guard with Frank Mason out with a rib injury and he excelled, leading the team in scoring with 27 points while also adding five rebounds, five assists, and a steal.

Adams deflected praise after the win, instead crediting his teammates for all doing a little bit more without Mason in the lineup.

"Cam (Reynolds) played well, it's always nice having Dragan down with us, JJ (Jemerrio Jones) almost had a triple-double," Adams said. "It's not just me. It is fun to be able to get those reps in at point guard, but, like I said, with him or without him, you know, we got good chemistry on this team. Everybody is going to step up."

When asked about both the most recent win and the winning ways of the team all season long, Reynolds said it starts with the right mentality and executing on the defensive end.

"Everyone wants to win," Reynolds said. "Everyone has a great attitude. Our defense, I mean it's one of the top in the league. And so I think that's really what drives it because once we get stops, we can run with anybody and outrun anybody. So I think that's what goes into it."

Reynolds and the Herd are back in action this week at home tonight against the Grand Rapids Drive. That game is Wisconsin's only home game of the week, and tips off at 7 p.m. in Menominee Nation Arena.

Cribbage game rarity dealt at Debs

Participants in the regular Monday night cribbage game at Debs Spare Time, 1303 Harrison St., witnessed player Phil Panoch score a 28-point hand followed by an even more rare 29 hand in a later game during their Jan 13 session.

Charles Nitz said the group had a six-hand game going at the time when Panoch drew each of the special hands, the highest and second highest scores possible in cribbage.

The website Cribbage Corner states the odds of a 29-point hand are 1 in 200,000 for a two-player game and goes much higher with more players. A 29 hand has all four 5's and the Jack of the cut suit.

SPACE JUNK

TRASH THAT'S OUT OF THIS WORLD

Have you noticed that all too often people leave litter behind when they go out and about? That causes problems for our planet and living things.

Since people started exploring space, we have been leaving litter behind. And that space litter is causing problems.

IS THE SKY FALLING?

NASA says that only about one piece of space litter falls to earth each day. Nearly all of this burns up as it enters the atmosphere.

HOW MUCH JUNK IS IN SPACE?

Space junk is a problem. Orbiting junk travels at tremendous speed, causing damage to working satellites and spacecraft like the International Space Station (ISS).

Orbiting Earth there are:

- 34,000 objects larger than 4 inches (10 cm) in diameter
- 900,000 objects ranging from .4 inches (1 cm) to 4 inches (10 cm) in size
- 128 million objects from .04 inches (1 mm) to .4 inches (1 cm)

Identified Flying Objects

Using a ruler, find objects around your classroom or home that are approximately the sizes listed above.

Draw a line to where each word belongs in this paragraph.

- SPEED
- TRAVELING
- MILES
- BOLTS
- PIECES
- IMPACT

PAINT PROBLEM

There are millions of smaller debris such as nuts, bolts, and even flecks of paint. Many of them are around the planet at 7km per second. At that speed a flock of paint could have the same impact as a motorcycle traveling at 60 miles per hour (95 km per hour)!*

STRANGE SPACE LITTER

Sometimes, astronauts drop things accidentally. And sometimes they leave things in space on purpose. Which of these things are really floating in space? Do the math to find out. Items that add up to an odd number are REAL. Those that add up to even numbers are science fiction!

ROBOT TO THE RESCUE?

Cleaning Up Space: The European Space Agency (ESA) has developed a four-armed robot which will be launched into space to help clean up the trash in 2025. The robot will gather up debris before diving back down to Earth, where both the robot and the junk will burn up in the atmosphere. Circle every other letter to discover the name of this mission.

Kid Scoop Together Book Scoop

Use the Decoder Ring to discover the name of this fun graphic novel by Drew Brockington, which is available at the library. To fill in the blanks, find the letter on the outer ring, then replace it with the letter below it on the inner ring.

Facing disaster on a global scale, the CatStronauts rally to save the day. Without their chief science officer, and with a broken telescope and a lack of funding, the situation looks dire. Even Pilot Waffles is orbiting Earth in nothing but a space suit. Drew Brockington's third graphic novel in the series follows these daring adventures in space with imagination and much hilarity.
